Johnson Plan Of Mediation Body May Nip Steel Strike

Union Chieftain Agrees Only Few Points Are Yet at Issue.

Final Agreement Expected Today

First Days of Roosevelt Regime Recalled in Swift Parleys.

A day of feverish conferences culminated yesterday in acceptance by the mighty Iron and Steel Institute of proposals which the Administration hoped would avert a strike by 100,000 steel workers.

M. F. (Big Mike) Tighe, leader of the grim-faced union spokesmen, intimated if adjustment could be made on a few points at issue the walkout, tentatively set for June 16, would be called off.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, Recovery administrator, sponsored the compromise plan. It calls for establishment of a three-man steel mediation board, similar to the group which figured in settlement of the threatened spring automobile strike.

Officials hoped a series of meetings today would be crowned by a definite agreement, but conceded new difficulties might arise.

Office Is Busy Scene.

Scenes reminiscent of the hectic first few months of the Roosevelt regime were enacted as the swift-moving negotiations progressed. Johnson's office was the battleground. Things hummed all day, with Cabinet officers, Senators, industrial barons and labor chieftains rubbing shoulders with each other.

Johnson, as dynamic as ever, employed the same tactics which won crushing victories in earlier disputes. He avoided bringing capital and labor together as he conferred first with one side and then the other.

Executives representing the Nation's great basic industry included Eugene Grace, president of Bethlehem; William A. Irvin, president of United States Steel, and L. E. Block, president of Inland.

Among the labor spokesmen were Tighe, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, and several members of the militant rank and file committee of the same organization. The rank and filers made their peace with Tighe earlier in the day after a momentary split.

Johnson Consults Helpers.

At intervals Johnson consulted Secretary Frances Perkins, Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, chairman of the National Labor Board; Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, and Donald Richberg, NRA general counsel.

President Roosevelt "watched" the negotiations from the White House. Johnson kept him informed on developments by telephone.

Unconfirmed reports were that the proposal accepted by the indus-

Salvador Is Hit By Hurricane

Martial Law Declared; Heavy Loss of Life Feared.

San Salvador, El Salvador, June 8 (U.P.).—Threat of pestilence, water shortage and looting in the hurricane-torn countryside caused declaration of martial law through this Central American republic today.

The storm caused tremendous damage in and about the capital. Heavy loss of life among the peasantry was feared. Rescue workers were sent to the worst stricken areas, carrying medical and other supplies.

Eight were dead and 500 homeless in the vicinity of San Salvador tonight. Communications were down, preventing a check on the extent of the wind's damage.

The hurricane ripped away power lines and badly damaged scores of buildings. Landslides blocked railroads and highways in the interior.

Property damage was estimated at upwards of $1,500,000. Pan-American Airways announced readiness to fly in relief supplies from Nicaragua or Guatemala, if necessary.

Heavy tropical rains drenching the coast with a hurricane moving northwest from British Honduras were reported in United Press advices from Mexico last Wednesday. Storm warnings were issued Thursday to the southern part of the Gulf of Mexico and the Gulf of Tehuantepec.

The States of Chiapas, Tabasco and Campeche, on the coast, were whipped by heavy winds and rain.

34 Fishermen Missing.

Seoul, Korea, June 8 (A.P.).—An official investigation today showed only 34 fishermen unreported following the severe storm off Kogendo Province June 6, which overtook 167 fishing boats carrying 900 men.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 8.—Prayers for rain offered up by drought-stricken farmers have been answered all right, but mainly with spotty torrents which have flooded thousands of acres in western Iowa and South Dakota and added to the damage instead of bringing real relief. Four deaths were reported in this area directly attributed to the elements.

Otherwise only scattered rains have fallen, enough in many places to put a crust on the dry earth and check the windstorms which have been scooping off the rich topsoil.

Cruickshank Open Leader; Cards 71-71

Tops Sarazen by 3 Shots; Cox Gets 75, Is Third; Final Today.

By Dave Herman
(Post Staff Correspondent).

Merion Cricket Club, Ardmore, Pa., June 8 (Spl.).—A little more than three weeks ago Bobby Cruickshank, 39-year-old Richmond, Va., professional, faced possible elimination in a play-off for the sectional qualifying trials for the National Open golf championship in his home town. He needed a curling 15-foot putt to qualify. He sank it.

Today in the second round of the National Open over this sacred ground where Bobby Jones made golf history, Cruickshank, the wee Scot with nerves of steel and a heart of iron, pounded out another brilliant 71, one above par, to dominate the field with a 36-hole total of 142. Cosharer of the first day's lead with Wiffy Cox, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Charlie Lacey, of Great Neck, N. Y., Cruickshank, a University of Edinburg graduate, maintained the even tenor of his pace to lead Gene Sarazen, former British and American champion and tournament favorite, by a three-stroke margin.

Sarazen added a 72 to his 73 and found himself entrenched in second place, one shot ahead of Wiffy Cox, of Brooklyn, who took a 75, and two shots in front of Billy Burke, 1931 open title holder; Horton Smith, winner of Bobby Jones' masters tournament; Leo Diegel, the home-town favorite, and 21-year-old Rodney Bliss, jr., Omaha, Nebr., amateur star.

With the final 36-hole struggle

Auto Injuries Prove Fatal To Rep. Coffin

Wife and Daughter Are at Bedside of Idaho Democrat.

Representative Thomas C. Coffin, 47, Democrat, of Idaho, died at Providence Hospital yesterday of injuries received when he was struck by an automobile on a driveway in the south grounds of the Capitol Tuesday.

Mrs. Coffin, who had taken a room in the hospital adjoining that of her husband, and their daughter, Jeanne, 12, were at the bedside when Mr. Coffin died. Mother and daughter returned last night to their apartments in the Roosevelt Hotel pending arrangements for the funeral, in charge of the sergeant at arms of the House. Interment will be in Pocatello, Idaho, their home.

Mr. Coffin did not regain consciousness after the accident.

Witnesses to the accident said Mr. Coffin had just left a group of friends and appeared to be deeply engrossed in thought. He is said to have stepped directly into the path of a slowly moving automobile driven by Morris Braefsky, 39, of 751 Quebec avenue northwest.

Mr. Coffin, known as a consistent "New Dealer" during his service in the House, was born in Caldwell, Idaho. He was graduated from Phillips-Exeter Academy at Exeter, N. H., in 1906, and thereafter attended the Sheffield Scientific School and the Law School of Yale University. He began the practice of law in Boise in 1911 and after moving to Pocatello served as mayor from 1931 to 1933. He married Mrs. Coffin, the former Aileen Franklin, of Pocatello, in 1911. During the World War Mr. Coffin served in the aviation branch of the United States Navy. He was elected to the Seventy-third Congress in 1932 from the Second Idaho District.

New York, June 8 (A.P.).—Joan Bennett, screen actress, and her husband, Gene Markey, writer, returned on the liner Aquitania today from a vacation in Italy, France and England.

Roberts Learns He Was Choice For Vice Presidency in 1932

William A. Roberts, peoples counsel of the District of Columbia, was a candidate for Vice President of the United States in 1932. Yesterday he heard about it for the first time.

Roberts received a letter of notification from Ross E. Black, of Paris, Va., chairman of the executive committee on nominations of the National Association Opposed to Blue Laws, Inc. Black wrote:

"About this time two years ago, Leland Barton, of Washington, was nominated by an executive committee representing the association for President of the United States We left it to Mr. Barton to select his running mate. He says he selected you as nominee for the Vice Presidency.

"I notified Mr. Barton of his nomination but at that time he had not made his selection. When Mr. Barton notified me of your selection I think I must have assumed that Mr. Barton had notified you, but he says he did not. I therefore beg your pardon for not officially notifying you. I do now formally notify you that you were so selected to run for Vice President.

"Mr. Barton has more sense than to think that there was any chance to be elected and made no effort. * * * So far as the mere honor, it can go down in history that you were the nominee and did never accept such nomination."

Mr. Roberts will thank Mr. Black for the honor.

41-Year Low Wheat Yield Is Predicted

Estimated 500,000,000 Bushels 125 Million Under Usage.

Congress Will Get Plan From President for Aid Today.

By Robert C. Albright.

Breaking 40-year records, the ruthless course of the drought continued its sabotage yesterday, while Government experts appraised its calamitous toll in grain bushels.

The lowest wheat crop since 1893 was forecast by the Agriculture Department—500,000,000 bushels—while oats, barley and rye showed similar losses. Nineteen States were grouped in the picture of desolation.

Rushing plans for relief, the White House this morning will lay the President's $525,000,000 program for live stock and human aid in stricken areas before the Congress, as parched leagues from Ohio to Nevada lie at the mercy of the skies.

"A sharp decline in crop prospects, heavy losses of early crops and, for this time of the year, a record low condition of pastures and low levels of milk production per cow and egg production per hen," is the way the crop reporting board tersely told the story.

Will Top Reserves.

The prospect of a 500,000,000-bushel wheat crop, against a 625,000,000-bushel normal consumption, meant one thing certainly—260,000,000 bushels in surplus grain reservoirs must be tapped next year for the Nation's bread loaf.

"The records for June in past years show nothing comparable with the situation this year," the board conceded.

The department's cold appraisal of prospects follows:

Oats, on which lean legions of live stock are dependent for food, may yield only 700,000,000 bushels, below the production of any year since 1898.

The production of oats straw, important substitute for hay when hay is high priced, will be equally below average.

Barley may have been damaged as much as oats, and rye may yield only 43 per cent of average, against 73 per cent last year.

Hay Crop Far Off.

Unless the weather is exceptionally favorable, tame and wild hay will not exceed 56,000,000 tons, compared with last year's short crop of 74,000,000 tons.

Winter wheat will reach only 400,357,000 bushels, well above last year's 351,030,000-bushel crop, but compared with a 632,061,000-bushel 5-year average.

Spring wheat was estimated worth only a 100,000,000 bushel crop, with conditions 41.3 per cent of normal.

As the President considered relief measures, his Cabinet was given a vivid picture of the calamitous cost by Acting Secretary of Agriculture Rexford G. Tugwell.

Preliminary to today's comprehensive plan for aid, Mr. Roosevelt touched briefly on the problem ahead in yesterday's message to Congress. He said:

"Many million acres of land must be restored to grass or trees

Children's Mouths Taped, Parents Go To Party, Then Jail

Pontiac, Mich., June 8 (A.P.).—Raymond De Harrold, 32, and his wife, Maybelle, 26, today faced arraignment in Municipal Court on cruelty charges on the complaint of police officers who said they found the two children of the couple bound to a bed in the De Harrold home, their mouths taped shut.

Called last night by neighbors, police found the mother at a party across the street. They took her to the county jail, where she spent the night. De Harrold, the officers said, was at a motion picture show.

The police said the children, Eugene, 4, and Neoma, 6, were alone in the house.

Ants Blind Baby, Probably for Life

Tennessee Child Victim of Attack in Crib.

Bells, Tenn., June 8 (A.P.).—Red ants, swarming into his crib, blinded 3-month-old Harold Watson Patrick probably for life.

Physicians said today the baby, attacked by the ants May 25 while his parents worked in a nearby field, is blind in both eyes and there is little possibility he ever will see again.

When the parents returned, the ants were all over the child and his face was a mass of cuts and bruises. Poison entered the bloodstream, affecting the eyesight.

Chinese River Pirates Loot Ship, Abduct One

Hankow, China, June 8 (A.P.).—A swarm of pirates, cruising the Yangtse's yellow waters in a miniature fleet of sampans, today captured and looted a Chinese steamer 30 miles below Ichang.

One passenger was kidnaped and held for ransom.

Murderer Decapitates Va. Marine

Body Found at Quantico; Link With Attack Case Sought.

Clew Is Gained From Fredericksburg Assault.

Quantico, Va., June 8 (Spl.).—Possible connection with the Kurz-Brown murder case in Fredericksburg was seen here today in the death of Private Barney N. Poole, United States Marine Corps, whose decapitated body was found by a group of children yesterday on the Marine reservation.

While a board of Marine officers pressed investigation into the mysterious death of Poole, it was rumored that Department of Justice operatives working on the Fredericksburg attack case, in which Miss Fannie Kurz was killed and her escort, Milton Brown, was injured seriously, came here today to view the body and investigate the case.

The fully clothed body of the Marine was found propped against a tree and the head, with his hat still upon it, was found some distance away. It appeared to have been severed cleanly as with a sharp instrument. Condition of the body indicated it had lain about two weeks, unseen, within 200 yards of the new officers' headquarters.

Opinion among Marine officers is divided as to whether Poole was murdered or was the victim of an accident. There are some who believe a tree falling across his neck may have severed the head. Others are as strongly convinced the evidence points to murder.

The Kurz-Brown attack occurred a little more than two weeks ago. Among the numerous rumors regarding the attack was one that two Quantico Marines and a girl were involved in the affair and this report further strengthened the view that there may have been some connection between the two cases.

There was no information available whether Poole's absence from duty had been noted prior to the finding of his body. Officials conducting the inquiry would not comment on the case except to admit that so far they had found no evidence of the circumstances surrounding his death. It was said no weapon had been found near the body and apparently there was no evidence of a struggle in the vicinity.

Possibility was seen that the man had been murdered elsewhere and the body and head brought here and placed in the clump of bushes on the reservation. Some officials found it difficult to understand how the victim could have been slain in such proximity to the officers' quarters without creating some commotion that would have attracted attention.

Poole's home address could not be ascertained this afternoon.

Capital's Traffic Ends Hungarian's World Cycle Tour

After traveling 46,000 miles by motorcycle through nearly all the capitals of Europe, Washington traffic yesterday brought an abrupt end to the tour of Imre Semendy, 28-year-old Hungarian, whose machine collided with an automobile and sent him to Casualty Hospital seriously injured.

Semendy, who left Budapest in 1929 on his 'round-the-world attempt, was struck down by the automobile of Harry H. Langley, 51, of the 2000 block of Randolph street northwest.

The vehicles collided at Bladensburg and Queens Chapel roads. Langley escaped uninjured, but his 11-year-old daughter, Elinor, was treated at Casualty Hospital for minor cuts. Police of the Twelfth Precinct charged him with reckless driving and released him on bond.

Semendy maintained himself by selling postcards. He intended to write a book when he finished his trek that would have taken him into eight more countries.

Officials at the Hungarian Legation, informed of his plight, said they would attempt to reach his relatives.

Briton Who Tried to Kill American Fined $125

Hamilton, Bermuda, June 8 (Spl.) Geoge Stott, an Englishman, was fined $125 in court today after conviction on a charge of attempting to murder Samuel Hayman Wainwright, a United States artist.

Stott shot the artist during a quarrel over criticism of a painting done by Wainwright. The wound was not serious.

Bare-Back Dresses At Court Irk Queen

London, June 8 (U.P.).—Queen Mary was displeased by the display of bare-backs and bizarre color schemes by debutantes at the first two courts in Buckingham Palace last month.

Therefore, those who attend the third and fourth courts, June 13 and 14, today were again instructed that court regulations governing styles for women must be strictly observed. The Queen approved the model court gown, with high neck, elbow-length sleeves and ankle-length dress.

Improved Social Setup For America Proposed In Roosevelt Message

President Tells Congress to Expect Outline in January.

Old-Age Insurance Idea Suggested

Guarantee of Positions One of Chief Aims of Democrats.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

President Roosevelt yesterday informed Congress that when it reconvenes in January he expects to have ready for its consideration a program designed to make it possible "for American families to live as Americans should."

This program, he explained, would deal with proposals to assure better and more decent housing facilities for the masses of people; a National plan for development and conservation of the Nation's water and fertile lands, and a scheme for a Federal system of unemployment and old-age insurance.

Except to urge prompt passage of the Administration's housing bill, yesterday reported to the House, the President did not concern himself with the immediate legislative program. His message was a notification to Congress of things to come and a justification for failure to act now on pressing social problems.

Outstanding Proposal.

Perhaps the most outstanding aspect of the message was the President's recognition, expressed for the first time in a State paper from so high an authority, that the Federal Government for many years to come must undertake the task of assisting and giving security to a large mass of the country's population.

Written in general terms, declaring that three great objectives—"the security of the home, the security of livelihood and the security of social insurance"—constituted "a minimum of the promise that we can offer to the American people," the Presidential pronouncement attracted little criticism and much praise on Capitol Hill.

The Democrats, as might be expected, hailed the President's message as "a magnificent conception"; "the trumpet call to new and greater achievements" and "splendid"—the latter greatly reiterated. The Republicans found no fault with him, except to intimate that the message made "a good political document" and, in several cases, to point out that all the Presidetnt's promises seemed to envisage would cost many, many billions of dollars. Many Republicans declined to comment.

Out of the ordinary run of com-

Film Star Forecasts Death; Dies in Week

Girl Who Rose to Movie Fame Knew Burials Come in Threes.

Pasadena, Calif., June 8 (A.P.).—Less than a week ago Dorothy Dell, Hollywood's newest screen luminary, voiced the trouper's superstition there would be another death soon in Hollywood's movie colony because actors' deaths come in threes.

"They always say that when death comes to one actor it comes to two others before very long," the 19-year-old husky-voiced, blonde actress mused aloud to friends on the day of memorial services for Lew Cody.

"There was Lilyan Tashman, and now Lew Cody—I wonder who'll be next."

Miss Dell was. She was killed early today when the automobile in which she was riding plunged off the highway near here, mowed down two telephone poles, caromed off a palm tree and rammed a boulder.

She was killed almost instantly. Her escort, Dr. Carl Wagner, prominent young physician, received injuries that caused his death a few hours later. The automobile was crumpled to about half its normal length.

There was no one left to tell the details of the death of the "Miss Universe" of 1930, who skyrocketed to celluloid stardom after a varied

Mais Named Fontaine Case 'Trigger Man'

Six Cities to Battle for Custody of Kendrick, Gang Ringleader.

While six cities prepared to battle for the privilege of trying John Kendrick, reputed member of a gang wanted for numerous crimes in Washington and along the Eastern seaboard, Robert Mais, 28, another suspect, was identified yesterday, according to Inspector F. S. W. Burke, as the man who shot and seriously wounded Mrs. Elizabeth Fontaine in Upper Darby, Pa., several weeks ago.

Meeting in Baltimore, officials from Washington, Richmond, New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk will present their claims today to indict and try Kendrick, who was arrested as he left a moving picture theater with a companion Thursday night in Johnson City, Tenn.

Detective Sergt. Floyd Truscott and Postal Agent De Ward will leave here for Baltimore early this morning. They hope to have Kendrick returned to Washington as a fugitive from justice. The warrant, which is one of the first to be issued under the act of May 18, 1934, making it an offense to pass from one State to another while eluding capture, was issued by U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage after news of Kendrick's capture was received.

Mais, 28, was wounded critically in Baltimore last week when he, William Davis, 40, and Marie McKeever, 34, were arrested by police.

In unraveling the Fontaine shooting, Inspector Burke yesterday stated that Mais and Marie McKeever had been drinking for three days and that Mrs. Fontaine was with them. Mais began to beat Mrs. McKeever, and Mrs. Fontaine threatened him with a submachine gun, Inspector Burke said.

"Mais pulled his gun and shot her," Burke stated.

When asked where Mrs. Fontaine

Senate Orders Tugwell Name Be Reported

Smith Calls Committee; Nominee Expected to Be Questioned.

After two and one-half hours of acrimonious debate, the Senate early last night instructed its Agricultural Committee to report to it by noon Tuesday the nomination of Rexford G. Tugwell to be Undersecretary of Agriculture.

Chairman Ellison D. Smith, of the Agricultural Committee, immediately called a meeting of the group for 10 a. m. Monday to consider the Tugwell nomination. It was indicated that the committee immediately would summon Tugwell before it to be questioned regarding his qualifications, his theories in respect to agriculture, and certain recent utterances made by him.

This solution of the handling of the Tugwell affair represented a compromise in which Smith, chief opponent of the youthful brain trust chieftain, seemed to have gained a partial victory in his fight. In accepting this compromise Smith prevented seemingly certain action by the Senate discharging his committee from further consideration of the nomination.

The compromise was offered by Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson as a substitute for his motion to discharge the committee in order to end debate as bitter as any that has occurred in this session of Congress. Not only did critics of Tugwell lash out at him but members of the Senate made sarcastic and nasty remarks to one another.

By accepting the compromise, Smith prevented a vote on Tugwell's nomination at least until next Wednesday; demonstruted a widefelt desire that Tugwell be interrogated regarding his beliefs, thus laying the foundation for a hearing at which the brain truster may be subjected to many embarrassing questions.

The possibility remains, should

U. S. Ghandi, in Full Undress, Visits Senate (But Very Briefly)

A man clad only in an abbreviated sheet walked into the public gallery of the Senate yesterday, causing consternation among frock-coated Chesley Jurney, sergeant at arms, and members of the Capitol police.

While members of the Senate were debating the silver bill, a clerk looked up into the gallery and spied the man dressed in the costume of the Mahatma Ghandi. Turning to Jurney, the clerk cried:

"There's a man in the Senate with no clothes on!"

With tails of his famous frock coat flying in the breeze, Jurney dashed past Vice President Garner's desk and up into the gallery, where he was joined by a half-dozen policemen. They ejected the strange character before Senators were aware of his presence.

The man told police his name was W. H. Goodell. He refused to reveal his address. He wore sandals, a loin cloth and a short white cape over his shoulders.

In one hand he carried a staff and in the other several books entitled "Nature," "Life Under the Sun," and others which indicated he might have been a member of a nudist colony.

"I can not talk," was the only statement he gave as police escorted him from the Capitol Grounds.

Senator Frederic C. Walcott (Republican), Connecticut, watched the police in action and commented:

"What do you want to arrest him for? Probably he's the only sane man in Washington."

Goodell was placed in a taxicab. As he drove off he shouted:

"I'm the American Gandhi."

Senate doorkeepers, who declared they could find no reason to deny Goodell entrance, said they believed he was "just a press agent for the nudists."

Plane Crashes In Fog; 4 Hurt

Copilot Dwight "Swede" Hansen, Spokane, who staggered, despite severe injuries, to civilization last night, using the air liner's compass to reach a telephone and call help.

Marian Bennett, Salt Lake City, stewardess.

P. C. Beezley, Seattle.

Robert Clark, Wenatchee, injured.

2 Youths Go on Trial In Lethal Auto Dash

Jeffersonville, Ind., June 8 (A.P.).—Two of the three youths who killed two peace officers in a wild ride in a stolen automobile Monday night, Edward Coffin, 22, of Greenfield, and Lacell Long, 22, of Helmsburg, went on trial here today charged with murder.

Robert Neal, 20, of Bloomington, the first one caught, was quoted by police at the time as having confessed. Prosecutor Clyde F. Brooks will seek death penalties.

if we are to prevent a new and man-made Sahara. Human knowledge is great enough today to give us assurance of success in carrying through the abandonment of many million of acres for agricultural use and the replacement of these acres with others on which at least a living can be earned."

Surplus Control Considered.

Meantime, the President admitted to newspapermen the Administration has been considering proposals for Government ownership and control of crop surpluses. He said no tangible conclusions have been reached. It had been rumored for some time that the plan was under discussion to provide insurance against future crop failure.

The President is expected to ask for the $525,000,000 deemed necessary to combat the drought, under a flexible, lump sum appropriation, that could be attached to the $1,178,000,000 second deficiency bill in the Senate.

He pointed out that many not on farms, but in city districts, have been directly hit by the drought. Out of the $525,000,000 relief total, $50,000,000 may be set aside for urban aid, that may be administered through work relief enterprises in and near cities.

The President said the main concern at present is to provide seed for crops that may be planted even at this late date. For purchase of wheat, corn, and other forage seed, $25,000,000 is expected to be asked in the message today.

Curtailment Stands

Mr. Roosevelt insisted the drought presents no problem in connection with the Administration's crop curtailment program. If a surplus is wiped out as a result of it, care will be taken to plant for a manageable surplus next year, to guard against possibility of food shortage, he said.

Law Class Picks NRA As Best 1934 Symbol

Chicago, June 8 (AP).—The Blue Eagle is to spread his wings in a colored glass window of Lincoln Hall at Northwestern University. It doesn't follow that Northwestern has signed a code for professors or students.

It means that, to the graduating class of the college of law, the NRA was the most significant event of 1934. Every year the senior class presents a window on which is depicted a symbol of the year.

Drought Sears Crops In Southwest Virginia

Richmond, June 8 (AP).—Gov. Peery today said that his native southwest Virginia is afflicted with a severe drought that has damaged pastures and growing crops materially.

Several days ago agricultural authorities had viewed with some misgiving the spread of the drought area into the Southwest. Meanwhile, eastern Virginia was finding the weather just a bit too wet, while the rainfall was adequate but not excessive in the central portions.

Cuban Cabinet Aid Gets Post After Duel

Havana, June 8 (AP).—Joaquin Martinez Saenz, who resigned as secretary of Cuba's treasury to engage in a hitless pistol duel, was restored to the cabinet today by a decree of President Mendieta.

Saenz engaged in the affair of honor yesterday with Oscar de la Torre, leader of the radical A. B. C. society.

Japanese Military Fliers Die in Falls

Tokyo, June 8 (AP).—Seven aviation fatalities in three days was the toll today of maneuvers at army and navy air bases.

Three naval fliers died of injuries received in the crash of their plane yesterday at the Omura air base, near Nagasaki. Two army aviators were killed at Osaka Wednesday and two navy fliers died at the Tateyama air base in other crashes.

Heavy Danville Rains Are Endangering Crops

Danville, Va., June 8 (Spl.).—Today was the fifteenth day that it has rained in Danville, bringing a menace to tobacco and corn, as well as to "depression" gardens through which the unemployed hope to get summer sustenance.

but not sufficiently extensive and soaking to insure the end of the drought without further help from the skies.

These sudden floods, which have swept rivers out of their banks, washed railroad tracks away, flooded whole farms, sent streams of yellow water running down highways, constitute only the latest of a series of visitations which, like the plagues of Biblical Egypt, have pounded despair into the hardy sons of the dauntless pioneers who wrested this rich bread basket from nature.

Nature Claiming It Back.

It seems as if nature, in a revengeful mood, were swooping down from all directions to claim it back.

Drought, flood, voracious grasshoppers, and hustling little hungry chinch bugs, all have combined to wreak their temporary damage. As if this wasn't enough, the pesky little starlings heard clear back East about this field day of woe and the malicious little creatures are beginning to appear on the scene, destroying large quantities of fruits and vegetables, spreading weed seeds, carrying deadly chicken diseases and otherwise making noisy nuisances of themselves.

But most dismaying of all, especially in the Dakotas and other States around Iowa, the wind storms, like mighty invisible dredges, are stripping off the crop-growing topsoil and carrying it Eastward, leaving once fertile farms standing as barren desert land. Travelers coming in from South Dakota report pathetic scenes of struggling farmers, whose land has been thus stripped, hauling topsoil back in their wagons, laboring over their large farms like a Chevy Chase gardener trying to resurface his lawn. Thousands of these farms have been ruined for all time.

In the private airplane of the Des Moines Register and Tribune, The Post correspondent was flown today over more than 400 miles of Iowa farm land extending to the South Dakota and Nebraska borders.

Even around Des Moines, the region least hit by the drought, pastures were burned to autumn brown. Dry creek beds wound snakelike across fields. Even the Raccoon River, upon which Des Moines depends for its water supply, showed huge streaks of dry bottom though there still is enough water to insure a safe supply. Torrential rainfall further out-State today will revive that stream.

Fields Cut by Torrents.

But as the plane nosed West toward the Dakota border the devastating effects of the floods which have replaced drought in the last 24 hours were evident. Fields were cut with creases where near cloudbursts had washed new paths through the fields. Thousands of acres were covered with water. Huge patches of mud showed where water had washed out entire fields.

The airplane skirted half a dozen rainstorms during the afternoon and by evening most of the western half of the State had received some rain. Corn, experts think, may be saved where it had not washed away. This is Iowa's first experience with an early season drought. Corn sends roots straight down and therefore withstands midseason drought easily. Early drought prevented some germination, but Iowans, always optimistic, believe they may yet with a little rain have their corn tall and weighted with full ears as usual.

Disaster Piling Up.

With disaster thus piling up in a greater heap than ever this year, on top of a decade of hard years filled with starvation prices, bank closings, and mortgage foreclosures, and upsetting within a few weeks the man-made calculations of AAA experts at Washington, it is not to be wondered that people, in their despairing helplessness against the forces which defy all human ingenuity, are appealing to Divine aid.

It is easy to be self-confident when you are prosperous, when you have your environment under your thumb; when you can, if you are good enough, get that customer to buy a suit of clothes or persuade him to sign up for that life insurance; or when you can order your stenographer to take a letter; or send out that gang to dig a hole for a new building. Those are the jobs for self-made men.

But when you have been out plowing from dawn to dark, and when you have drilled your seed, and then wake up in the night and hear the howling wind, and go out anxiously at dawn and see your seed hundreds of feet up in the air, blowing away with your very farm and leaving you nothing but the hard, barren understrata, you can't order a gang of farm hands to go out and bring that farm back. You can't do anything but wring your hands and wonder how the kids will eat next winter.

Prayers Put on Air.

That's when men really begin to wonder what it's all about. It was for these bewildered souls that Gov. Langer of North Dakota issued his proclamation calling for a day of prayer for rain. It is why Howard L. Smith, of LeMars, Iowa, wrote an open letter to the Des Moines Register asking Gov. Herring to do the same thing. It is why newspaper editorials and letters from readers are reciting again the story of old Egypt and Joseph and the seven years of plenty followed by the seven years of famine. It is why the National Broadcasting Co. put prayers for rain on its network.

Like a thirst-stricken desert traveler seeing the mirage, rough-handed farmers are writing apostrophes to the rain that they want so much. This one came from V. O. Allison, of Hampton, Iowa.

"The hopelessness and despair of people seeing their pastures brown and bare in May," he wrote. "The intense, unbearable heat. New corn shriveling. Oats turning sickly yellow. Then when things seem past hope—rain! Trees, shrubs, crops lifting their arms in thankfulness. The air clean once more. Our children, in bathing suits, racing about with happy shouts. Marks of discontent being subtly erased from adult faces. Rain! Evidently, if you plumb the depths of a drought, you appreciate more fully the beauty and wonder of rain, and the true meaning of thankfulness."

Now it is easy to understand a little of what is behind the Indian Rain Dances. Poetry rises not only out of extreme joy but also out of deep despair.

There is through all of this emotional agony a thread of feeling sometimes expressed that the farm belt is suffering the vengeance of God for having attempted to control the fertility of nature. One story is going around, largely by word of mouth, that a schism took place this spring in one religious sect which had been accustomed each spring to pray for bountiful crops.

Most of the farmer members had signed acreage reduction contracts and they were uncertain whether, while thus moving to reduce their crops, they should at the same time pray for larger ones. But by and large, farmers are grateful for Washington's Federal aid—grateful enough so that they are not asking any questions as to the religious implications. Were it not for this money coming in from the Federal Treasury, even their prayers would be of little avail to save them from annihilation.

In Iowa, corn hog reduction money is coming in at the rate of $20,000 to $30,000 a day. These payments, which will total $72,000,000, have just begun. When they are all received, Iowa will have had from the AAA this year a total of $131,260,000, including corn loans and wheat payments. South Dakota has received about $20,000,000 in Washington money. This money, and drought relief funds just being provided for, are manna from a heaven that is giving them nothing else but bad news and they are grateful for it, whatever they may have thought of the professors and their complicated plans.

Calamity Marks Children.

But the story of this epic tragedy is one that statistics can not reach. It seems unlikely that such a calamity will fail to leave its mark on the minds not only of the adult generation but of the children whose earliest memories will always be of nature that would not give a man a break.

Time only will tell what the effect may be. These people could be ground down into as hopeless existence as the mountain folk of the South. Or, like their forbears who left hopeless lands to come to America where they believed there was due reward for hard work, they may decide that the grandparents had the right idea, but got into the wrong occupation and they may head for the cities. It is hard to keep these tough-bodied Nordics down.

In any event, thousands will have to move because their farms were blown away.

In western South Dakota, preparations already are being made to move stranded farmers to richer State-owned land in the eastern part of the State. The State owns some 4,000 farms, most of them taken in payment for taxes. An attempt may be made to replant windstripped western land in grass and use it for pasture, or it may be decided to let it go native.

Secretary Wallace had just been through part of the drought country and he left still believing that man can do something toward controlling his agricultural environment.

Man's Methods Kinder.

"I do not see," he said, "how anyone can say a kind word for nature's method of crop reduction. Man's methods may be full of imperfections, his machinery as crude and uncertain as all of his inventions in their early stages, but they are perfection itself in comparison with the occasional crudeness, the ruthlessness and the uncertainties of nature."

But that doesn't help the farmer whose farm is gone, blown right out from under his eyes, or whose water has dried up—the underground water level in Iowa has dropped 12 feet in the last 50 years. He is willing to go out every day in the hot noon sun to pour crude oil along the furrows thrown up to block the chinch bugs and to drag a log along to crush them. He has seen hail and drought ruin his crops and has borrowed to try it again the next year. But in South Dakota, for instance, he has had disaster four years in a row.

Nearly 20 years ago the North Dakota Nonpartisan League got its start because Minneapolis millers were thought to be gypping them by trick grading of their wheat. They went on a rampage that turned the State and most of the Northwest upside down.

This time they can't blame the millers, the bankers nor Washington. There's nobody to blame. That's what makes it so hard to take.

Drought Seems Broken In Northwest Nebraska

Outside of the area covered by the correspondent of The Post, the Associated Press reported rains of from 3 to 3½ inches in southwestern Minnesota. University farm experts said that normal precipitation should give the State an adequate feed crop to tide its live stock over the winter. They said chances were good for a fair corn crop. One said continued regular rain was needed to save the late crops of small grain from the destruction which overtook the first ones.

The drought appeared to be broken in northeastern Nebraska, where rains have continued for several days. Corn and hay were reported in good condition there. Thursday night's rain covered most of eastern Nebraska, but that area needed much more rain. Small grains in the State were generally poor or a failure.

Pumps loaned by oil companies were put to work in the northern part of Kansas, which failed to share in the downpours, to draw water from streams for live stock. A 3-mile pipe line was being laid from the Johnson City, Ill., water supply to the Franco Mine No. 1 after the drought had emptied the mine's reservoir and forced abandonment of operations.

Little or no rain fell in the central valley region.

Wallace Urges Patience, Vigor In Drought Aid

Foresees Plan for Future Growing Out of Calamity.

St. Paul, June 8 (AP).—Cooperative efforts are solving the drought relief problem today, Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace, told a gathering of live stock raisers at the University of Minnesota Farm School where he voiced a spirit of optimism.

Immediately afterward he met with Gov. Floyd B. Olson for a short conference on drought relief conditions.

Later, Gov. Olson was represented as having discussed new phases of a drought relief program for farmers, entailing an amplified scheme of work embracing highways and conservation projects.

Secretary Wallace was understood to have assured the Minnesota executive of his cooperation in furthering such a plan that would necessitate additional grants of Federal funds to this State amounting to several million dollars for undertaking improvements for roads, water conservation, such as building of dams, and preservation of forests.

Wallace left with the live stock producers the warning that it was up to the people of the Nation to "decide in what direction they want to go—whether to go on with the AAA or decide to revive our world trade by removing barriers and restore foreign buying power."

United determination, Wallace said, would achieve unexampled prosperity for industry and agriculture as he counselled intensive work by every one to erase the drought calamity and provide farmers with seed and stock feed.

National and State Governments cooperating with farmers, coupled with recent rain, has opened the way toward solution of the drought problem, the secretary said.

"If the farmers will adopt a reasonableness in regard to the entire National problem," he said, "the calamity of the drought will be converted into a plan for the future. We must have patience, understanding, and vigorous prosecution of the job in hand.

"The AAA is not a hard and fast program. It is flexible and can be modified. But it is going to be applied intelligently."

Churches Join In Movie War

Protestants Will Cooperate Against Indecent Pictures.

Cooperation with the Catholic Church in its drive against indecent motion pictures was pledged yesterday by the Protestant churches of Washington.

This was announced by Wilbur LaRoe, jr., chairman of the committee on civic affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches, after a conference with Mrs. Kathryn Kirk, head of a local committee of women of the Catholic Church, which initiated the crusade.

Mr. LaRoe served notice that "box offices will feel the result unless they cooperate with us."

"We have made up our minds," he added, "to put an end to disgraceful and indecent motion pictures in the Capital, and I believe that with such a splendid start made by the Catholic interests, and with the Protestants joining hands with them, we shall be able to get results."

As a first step in the campaign, thousands of pledge cards, to be signed by church people promising their cooperation, will be circulated. Other details of the campaign will be worked out in the next few days.

Murder Clews Lacking in Will

Retired School Teacher Leaves Entire Estate to Cousin.

The will of Miss Mary Elizabeth Sheads, murdered retired school teacher, long sought by police because of the possibility it might contain a solution to the mystery surrounding her slaying, failed to reveal a clew when it was read in the District Supreme Court yesterday after the document had been filed officially in the office of the Register of Wills.

Miss Sheads, found slain in her apartment at 2000 Sixteenth street northwest, on the night of May 24, left her entire estate to a cousin, John Lynn Sheads, manager of a store at Seventh and E streets northwest. The will did not estimate the value of the estate.

Expressing a desire to be buried in the family burial plot at Gettysburg, Miss Sheads made provision for the perpetual care of the lot. The only other provision was that a balance of $90 due the graduate endowment fund of the George Washington University should be paid. The will was dated July 15, 1931, with the American Security & Trust Company named as executor.

Capone's Brother, Aid, Freed on Suspicion

Chicago, June 8 (AP).—The World's Fair may have a grievance against John Capone, young brother of Prisoner Alphonse, and against Joseph Fusco, who once bossed the Capone breweries, but the police admitted today they haven't a thing on the pair.

Capone and Fusco, arrested at the Exposition last night, were released from detective bureau cells today.

was being hidden by police and Department of Justice agents, Burke merely shook his head.

"It would be a dangerous thing for anyone to know that now, with known killers at large," asserted Burke.

Two Still at Large.

The capture of Kendrick left only two members of the tri-State gang, of which they were members, at large. These are Hubert Myers, 39, and Arthur Misanas, 37. Those who now have been captured are Kendrick, Mais, William Davis, 40, Barbara Kendrick, 28, and Marie McKeever, 34.

Kendrick is an escaped Lorton convict who is wanted here for the Union Station mail robbery December 5, in which a guard was wounded seriously. He also is suspected of having committed numerous robberies in the District, as well as having participated in the murder of a Government mail truck driver in Richmond, Va., and a $60,000 bank robbery in the same city.

With him at the time of his arrest was a man who registered as Ed Henry. Henry was held on a charge of harboring a fugitive from justice.

After fixing bond for Kendrick at $50,000, United States Commissioner W. R. Respass at Johnson City set the time for his preliminary hearing as June 14.

Woman Caught in Asheville.

A few hours before Kendrick was arrested, Ruth Nash, alias Jean Ramsey, blonde companion with whom, according to police, he had been seen in Richmond, was taken into custody in Asheville, N. C.

Police said Miss Nash had been seen with Kendrick when he slipped through their fingers in Richmond, and headed south toward King's Mountain, N. C. At King's Mountain, according to officers, the trail became too "hot," so the couple separated.

Miss Nash will be returned with Kendrick, officials said, to face questioning.

The problem of where Kendrick shall be tried remained a question of which jurisdiction could show the most "airtight" case against him. Officials are seeking to avoid any possible loopholes in the law.

Robbery Here Failure.

Washington and Richmond are particularly anxious to get Kendrick, it was announced late yesterday. The mail guard who was wounded in the December holdup at the Union Station here only recently was able to leave the hospital.

This robbery was a failure, as the bandits got only a few sacks of worthless mail, narrowly missing a valuable haul.

In Baltimore Kendrick is wanted in connection with three holdups.

From his cell in Johnson City last night Kendrick denied any part in the Richmond murder and robbery.

"This patient is not insane nor feeble minded," Dr. Hoffman told Judge Benjamin P. Epstein, who is to try Hammel June 13.

Los Angeles Reports 565 Paralysis Cases

Better Social Set-up Planned By Roosevelt

President Tells Congress to Expect Proposal in January.

ment, however, was the statement of Senator Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan, the assistant Senate Republican leader. Vandenberg is aligned with the conservative wing of the Republican party, although hec annot be called a stand-patter.

"An excellent statement of the inevitable new social responsibilities of government," asserted Vandenberg. "I completely sympathize with these objectives and expect to help carry them out. But social progress does not need to mean socialism. We must avoid the latter, while embracing the former.

"The President's message is a timely and sympathetic postscript to the new declaration upon these subjects by the Republican National Committee at Chicago earlier in the week."

The feeling was general on Capitol Hill that the President's message would make one of the best of Democratic campaign documents this fall. It contained more quotable lines—brief, sparkling declarations, such as "I place the security of the men, women and children of the Nation first" and "we must dedicaate ourselves anew to a recovery of the old and sacred possessive rights for which mankind has constantly struggled: homes, livlihood and individual security"—than any message Mr. Roosevelt has sent to Congress since his inaugural speech.

Critics Answered.

Mr. Roosevelt also used this message to answer his critics. He held that "it is childish to speak of recovery first and reconstruction afterward." Further on, he contended that the "new deal" leaves "ample scope for the exercise of private initiative." He added that "we have not imposed undue restrictions upon business' and that "we have not opposed the incentive of reasonable and legitimate private profit."

He recited that "there are a few among us who would still go back," but that "these few offer no substitute for the gains already made, nor any hope for making gains for human happiness."

"They loudly asserted that individual liberty is being restricted by government, but when they are asked what individual liberties they have lost, they are put to it to answer," the President asserted.

The message, however, did not commit the President to any specific, detailed approach to the objectives which he contended must be reached. In promising measures to provide "decent homes," the President's detailed plan may be an elaboration of the present housing bill and it also may call for slum clearance and the erection of modern, cheap housing facilities that will cost billions of dollars.

Problems of People.

That also is true of his proposal to readjust the problem of hundreds of thousands of persons residing where there is no reasonable prospect of a living in the years to come. This may mean a modest program for the irrigation of arid lands, the prevention of "a new and man-made Sahara," the development of projects like the Tennessee River Valley undertaking and the gradual purchase of submarginal land for purposes of forestation, leaving men and women free to move into the new developments, if they wish.

But it also may mean, as suggested last December by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, the immediate purchase by the Government of 40,000,000 acres of poor agricultural land and the moving of those now living on such land to more prosperous parts of the country. It also might include the homestead subsistence projects on a wholesale scale.

Butler for Id-Age Pensions.

Text of Roosevelt Message

Full text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress outlining a long-term program for social legislation:

You are completing a work begun in March, 1933, which will be regarded for a long time as a splendid justification of the vitality of representative government. I greet you and express once more my appreciation of the cooperation which has proved so effective.

Only a small number of the items of our program remain to be enacted, and I am confident that you will pass on them before adjournment. Many other pending measures are sound in conception, but must, for lack of time or of adequate information, be deferred to the session of the next Congress. In the meantime, we can well seek to adjust many of these measures into certain larger plans of governmental policy for the future of the Nation.

You and I, as the responsible directors of these policies and actions, may, with good reason, look to the future with confidence, just as we may look to the past 15 months with reasonable satisfaction.

On the side of relief he have extended material aid to millions of our fellow citizens.

On the side of recovery we have helped to lift agriculture and industry from a condition of utter prostration.

Recurrence of Collapse To Be Avoided.

But, in addition to these immediate tasks of relief and recovery we have properly, necessarily and with overwhelming approval determined to safeguard these tasks by rebuilding many of the structures of our economic life and of reorganizing it in order to prevent a recurrence of collapse.

It is childish to speak of recovery first and reconstruction afterward. In the very nature of the processes of recovery we must avoid the destructive influences of the past. We have shown the world that democracy has within it the elements necessary to its own salvation.

Less hopeful countries where the ways of democracy are very new may revert to the autocracy of yesterday. The American people can be trusted to decide wisely upon the measures taken by the Government to eliminate the abuses of the past and to proceed in the direction of the greater good for the greater number.

Our task of reconstruction does not require the creation of new and strange values. It is rather the finding of the way once more to known, but to some degree forgotten, ideals and values. If the means and details are in some instances new, the objectives are as permanent as human nature.

Individual's Security Comes First of All.

Among our objectives I place the security of the men, women and children of the Nation first.

This security for the individual and for the family concerns itself primarily with three factors. People want decent homes to live in; they want to locate them where they can engage in productive work; and they want some safeguard against misfortuness which cannot be wholly eliminated in this man-made world of ours.

In a simple and primitive civilization homes were to be had for the building. The bounties of nature in a new land provided crude but adequate food and shelter. When land failed, our ancestors moved on to better land. It was always possible to push back the frontier, but the frontier has now disappeared. Our task involves the making of a better living out of the lands that we have.

So also, security was attained in the earlier days through the interdependence of members of families upon each other and of the families within a small community upon each other. The complexities of great communities and of organized industry make less real these simple means of security. Therefore, we are compelled to employ the active interest of the Nation as a whole through government in order to encourage a greater security for each individual who composes it.

Housing Campaign Must Be Carried On.

With the full cooperation of the Congress we have already made a serious attack upon the problem of housing in our great cities. Millions of dollars have been appropriated for housing projects by Federal and local authorities, often with the generous assistance of private owners. The task thus begun must be pursued for many years to come. There is ample private money for sound housing projects; and the Congress, in a measure now before you, can stimulate the lending of money for the modernization of existing homes and the building of new homes. In pursuing this policy we are working toward the ultimate objective of making it possible for American families to live as Americans should.

In regard to the second factor, economic circumstances and the forces of nature themselves dictate the need of constant thought as to the means by which a wise government may help the necessary readjustment of the population. We cannot fail to act when hundreds of thousands of families live where there is no reasonable prospect of a living in the years to come. This is especially a national problem. Unlike most of the leading Nations of the world, we have so far failed to create a National policy for the development of our land and water resources and for their better use by those people who can not make a living in their present positions. Only thus can we permanently eliminate many millions of people from the relief rolls on which their names are now found.

The extent of the usefulness of our great natural inheritance of land and water depends on our mastery of it. We are now so organized that science and invention have given us the means of more extensive and effective attacks upon the problems of nature than ever before. We have learned to utilize water power, to reclaim deserts, to recreate forests and to redirect the flow of population. Until recently we have proceeded almost at random, making many mistakes.

Possibility of Desert In Interior Cited.

There are many illustrations of the necessity for such planning. Some sections of the Northwest and Southwest, which formerly existed as grazing land, were spread over with a fair crop of grass. On this land the water table lay a dozen or 20 feet below the surface, and newly arrived settlers put this land under the plow. Wheat was grown by dry farming methods. But in many of these places today the water table under the land has dropped to 50 or 60 feet below the surface and the top soil in dry seasons is blown away like driven snow. Falling rain, in the absence of grass roots, filters through the soil, runs off the surface, or is quickly reabsorbed into the atmosphere. Many million acres of such land must be restored to grass or trees if we are to prevent a new and man-made Sahara.

At the other extreme, there are regions originally arid, which have been generously irrigated by human engineering. But in some of these places the hungry soil has not only absorbed the water necessary to produce magnificent crops, but so much more water that the water table has now risen to the point of saturation, thereby threatening the future crops upon which many families depend.

Human knowledge is great enough today to give us assurance of success in carrying through the abandonment of many millions of acres for agricultural use and the replacing of these acres with others on which at least a living can be earned.

Next Session to Receive Carefully Drawn Plan.

The rate of speed that we can usefully employ in this attack on impossible social and economic conditions must be determined by business-like procedure. It would be absurd to undertake too many projects at once or to do a patch of work here and another there without finishing the whole of an individual project. Obviously, the Government can not undertake National projects in every one of the 435 Congressional districts, nor even in every one of the 48 States. The magnificent conception of National realism and National needs that this Congress has built up has not only set an example of large vision for all time, but has almost consigned to oblivion our ancient habit of pork barrel legislation: to that we can not and must not revert. When the next Congress convenes I hope to be able to present to it a carefully considered National plan, covering the development and the human use of our natural resources of land and water over a long period of years.

In considering the cost of such a program it must be clear to all of us that for many years to come we shall be engaged in the task of rehabilitating many hundreds of thousands of our American families. In so doing we shall be decreasing future costs for the direct relief of destitution. I hope that it will be possible for the Government to adopt as a clear policy, to be carried out over a long period, the appropriation of a large, definite, annual sum so that work may proceed year after year not under the urge of temporary expediency, but in pursuance of the well-considered rounded objective.

The third factor relates to security against the hazards and vicissitudes of life. Fear and worry based on unknown danger contribute to social unrest and economic demoralization. If, as our Constitution tells us, our Federal Government was established among other things "to promote the general welfare," it is our plain duty to provide for that security upon which welfare depends.

Next Winter to See Start of Social Insurance.

Next winter we may well undertake the great task of furthering the security of the citizen and his family through social insurance.

This is not an untried experiment. Lessons of experience are available from States, from industries and from many nations of the civilized world. The various types of social insurance are interrelated; and I think it is difficult to attempt to solve them piecemeal. Hence, I am looking for a sound means which I can recommend to provide at once security against several of the great disturbing factors in life—especially those which relate to unemployment and old age. I believe there should be a maximum of cooperation between States and the Federal Government. I believe that the funds necessary to provide this insurance should be raised by contribution rather than by an increase in general taxation. Above all, I am convinced that social insurance should be National in scope, although the several States should meet at least a large portion of the cost of management, leaving to the Federal Government the responsibility of investing, maintaining and safeguarding the funds constituting the necessary insurance reserves.

I have commenced to make, with the greatest of care, the necessary actuarial and other studies necessary for the formulation of plans for the consideration of the Seventy-fourth Congress.

These three great objectives—the security of the home, the security of livelihood, and the security of social insurance are, it seems to me a minimum of the promise that we can offer to the American people. They constitute a right which belongs to every individual and every family willing to work. They are the essential fulfillment of measures already taken toward relief, recovery and reconstruction.

Step Is Only Return To Values Once Lost.

This seeking for a greater measure of welfare and happiness does not indicate a change in values. It is rather a return to values lost in the course of our economic development and expansion.

Ample scope is left for the exercise of private initiative. In fact, in the process of recovery, I am greatly hoping that repeated promises that private investment and private initiative to relieve the Government in the immediate future of much of the burden it has assumed will be fulfilled. We have not imposed undue restrictions upon business. We have not opposed the incentive of reasonable and legitimate private profit. We have sought rather to enable certain aspects of business to regain the confidence of the public. We have sought to put forward the rule of fair play in finance and industry.

It is true that there are a few among us who would still go back. These few offer no substitute for the gains already made, nor any hope for making future gains for human happiness. They loudly assert that individual liberty is being restricted by government, but when they are asked what individual liberties they have lost, they are put to it to answer.

We must dedicate ourselves anew to a recovery of the old and sacred possessive rights for which mankind has constantly struggled—homes, livelihood and individual security. The road to these values is the way of progress. Neither you nor I will rest content until we have done our utmost to move further on that road.

Mediation Plan May Prevent Steel Walkout

Peace Expected Today as Result of Proposal by Johnson.

trialists involved appointment of a three-man mediation board for the industry to be composed of Dr. Leo Wolman, as spokesman for the Government; one representative of company unions and one outstanding liberal. The union was understood to be seeking a more specific guarantee that it would be recognized as the collective bargaining agency for its members.

The board, it was said, would supervise mill elections for choice of collective bargaining representatives and would arbitrate other grievances, such as earlier refusal of the manufacturers to recognize union spokesmen.

Meet at 2:30 Today.

As he departed Tighe remarked: "We had a fine meeting. We will be back at 2:30 tomorrow (Saturday). No agreement has been reached so far as we are concerned. We are optimistic, but then we are always optimistic."

Asked whether he saw Grace and the other manufacturers, Tighe thumped his portly stomach nervously with a straw hat and commented:

"Yes, I shook hands with them."

On second thought, he cautioned reporters not to "say anything about that."

A few minutes later the employers emerged and joked with correspondents about the hand-shaking incident.

"I shook hands with a couple of them, but I didn't ask their names," Block confided.

Wagner Sees Agreement.

Wagner reported an agreement was in sight and "a fine cooperative spirit" was displayed by all concerned.

McGrady declared a final agreement would have to be approved by a referendum of individual union members.

Miss Perkins gave her version of developments in these words:

"I never diagnose a patient while he's still sick in bed."

She later slipped in and out of the White House by a back door to report to Mr. Roosevelt.

It was at a morning conference called by Miss Perkins that Tighe and the rank and file committee smoothed over their differences. They elected a committee to negotiate for the union, including Tighe, Edward W. Miller and William J. Long, both of Weirton, W. Va.; Clarence Irwin, Youngstown, Ohio, and Earl J. Forbeck, McKeesport, Pa.

Roosevelt in Background.

The rank and file group visited the White House and made a second unsuccessful attempt within two days to see the President. Indications there were that Mr. Roosevelt would take a hand only in the event that Johnson, Miss Perkins and Wagner failed.

While refraining from visiting Johnson's office, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, figured in the negotiations. He talked at length with Tighe and other steel workers, advising them on procedure.

In announcing acceptance of his proposal by Grace and his associates, Johnson said their action represented "a very forward step on the part of the institute."

As the conferences began to show prospects of a happy solution, Johnson drove to Bolling Field with McGrady. He intended to board a plane and fly to Chicago for a speech before the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union. Poor weather, however, caused him to return to his office and deliver the talk by long distance telephone.

U. S. Asks Trial Setting On Weirton Injunction

Wilmington, Del., June 8 (AP).—Government counsel today requested Federal Judge John P. Nields to set a date for hearing testimony on a permanent injunction, to prevent the Weirton Steel Co. from taking part in the election of collective bargaining representatives by its employes.

Judge Nields last month dismissed the Government's motion for a preliminary injunction, on the ground the court did not have jurisdiction.

Trio in Truck Clash Seized

Baltimore Meat Cargoes Are Brought Here Under Guard.

Six Baltimore meat trucks were escorted into Washington yesterday under police guard following a near riot between the drivers and alleged Baltimore truck strikers, near Elkridge, Md.

Maryland State police arrived from Laurel in time to arrest three of the alleged strikers and to assist in rescuing one of the trucks that had been shoved over an embankment by the mob of 30 men.

Capt. William McK. Johnson, head of the State troopers, and Lieut. Ruxton P. Ridgley brought a detail of 20 policemen from Baltimore to take charge of the situation.

Capt. Johnson said the arrested men would be taken to Ellicott City and charged with hurling stones at the trucks. They had not reached the county seat last night, though, and it was "supposed they had gone to Baltimore."

Witnesses to the trouble at Elkridge said three trucks were stopped with a shower of stones. The drivers were ordered out. A truck, police said, belonged to the Davidson Transfer & Storage Co., of Baltimore, against whom the strike is aimed, was shoved over an embankment.

Dorothy Dell Dies As Auto Crashes

Miss Dell was pinned in the wreckage.

Miss Dell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elbert L. Goff, formerly of New Orleans, and their younger daughter, Helen, sped to the hospital. The mother, recently operated on by Dr. Wagner, was near collapse.

The tragedy ended a brief but spectacular career on stage and screen. As a native of Hattiesburg, Miss., the blonde-haired girl went to New Orleans, entered a beauty contest in 1929 and took second place.

Finally Got Into Follies.

In 1930 she entered the international beauty show by winning first place in a local contest. The show went broke and she financed her own way to Galveston, Tex., where she was designated as "Miss America" and finally as "Miss Universe."

She toured a vaudeville circuit, playing a minor role. Then the late Florenz Ziegfeld saw her and she reached his "Follies." She became a hit almost overnight. The "Follies" closed and Dorothy Dell went to the night clubs. Again her star was dim, but only for a while. Next she was in Hollywood with a movie contract.

Miss Dell became a potential star in "Wharf Angel." One of her last works was in "Little Miss Market," which opens its showing tomorrow in New Orleans, where she started her march to fame.

Salesman Shoots Himself at Zoo

Found Dying in Car Parked in Grounds.

Clutching a .38-caliber revolver, Richard L. Bonta, 38, of the 1300 block of Girard street northwest, was found dying late yesterday in a coupe parked in an isolated section of the Zoo grounds not far from the Harvard street entrance. He died from a bullet wound in the head half an hour after being admitted to Emergency Hospital.

Bonta was a solicitor for Harris & Ewing, photographers. He is survived by his widow, Martha.

He was found by Park Policeman C. F. Lloyd. The shot had not been heard.

In a suit of clothes on the seat beside him was discovered a note not believed to have any bearing upon the shooting. The note read: "If you leave key in car will bring it up tonight.—Signed, night watchman. Office of Architect of Capitol."

Two Hurt, Cab Burned In Cleveland Walkout

Walter Reed Road-Clearing Plan Offered

Zoning Group Suggests Cutting Through of Whittier Place.

In granting 7 of 17 requests for changes in zoning yesterday, the District Zoning Commission also began negotiations to solve the highway tangle near Walter Reed Hospital caused by the War Department's refusal to dedicate property for Aspen street.

Because of this refusal, the District has been unable to cut Aspen street through from Georgia avenue to Sixteenth street. This street, according to highway plans, was to run along the southern boundary of Walter Reed Hospital.

The commission promised consideration of a petitioner's request for a zoning change in property south of Walter Reed, if the petitioner would dedicate sufficient land for the extension of Whittier place from Georgia avenue to Sixteenth street.

Street Proposal Offered.

This would mean that Whittier place rather than Aspen street would be the last east-west street south of the hospital, and that Fourteenth and Thirteenth streets would stop at Whittier place rather than a block further north at Aspen street.

Although the commission denied the request for a change in the property's zoning from restricted "A" residential area to "A" residential area, the petitioners were told of this plan which, if they carry out to the paproval of the District Commissioners and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission their request then will receive favorable consideration.

Officers Hunt Dillinger Aids In Auto Camps

Tommy Carroll's Friend Keeping Agents in Iowa Search.

Waterloo, Iowa, June 8 (AP).—Tourist camp between Waterloo and Cedar Rapids held secrets of the identity and whereabouts of Tommy Carrol's recent companions, as Federal agents searched today for fleeing friends of the dead Dillinger gangster.

Accompanying them was Jean Crompton, 21, arrested yesterday when Carroll was shot down as he resisted officers on a downtown street. She told the officers that she and Carroll had stayed in tourist camps near here.

Federal, State and local officers sought a man and woman said to have been seen here with Carroll and the Crompton girl. The man was believed to be George Nelson, called by Dillinger "Baby Face."

Arrangements for transfer of the Crompton girl to the reformatory at Alderson, W. Va., awaited arrival of Probation Officer William McGrath from Chicago, following revocation of the girl's probation by a Federal judge.

She had been sentenced to imprisonment of a year and a day on a charge of harboring Dillinger and members of his gang at a resort near Mercer, Wis.

At first the girl claimed sshe was married to Carroll. Later she admitted they were not married and that she had a husband in Chicago.

Carroll's widow, Mrs. Viola Carroll, lives in St. Paul, where his body will be taken Saturday morning for burial.

To the long list of bank robberies were added at least two slayings and other crimes for which Carroll was wanted.

Sheriff John P. Wall, of Hennepin County, Minn., stated that Carroll and four other men were sought in connection with the slaying of Theodore Kidder, a salesman, at St. Louis, March 4.

Commissioner Breaks County Aid Deadlocks

Stafford Accepts VERA Offer and Adopts Insurance Plan.

Stafford Courthouse, Va., June 9 (Spl.).—Commissioner R. H. L. Chichester twice was called in yesterday to break two deadlocks of the Stafford County Board of Supervisors over county contributions to relief projects, both of which he decided affirmatively.

The Virginia Emergency Relief Administration's offer to pay $4,000 in wages to 100 men to repair the county's secondary roads this summer, under the supervision of the State Highway Department, providing the county posted $50 to cover the cost of medical examinations, was favored by Julian V. Brooks and Chairman J. W. Maddox. R. H. Estes and Newman Knight opposed it, but the deadlock was broken in favor of acceptance by Chichester.

The same division was broken by Chichester on a petition brought up by J. C. Fisher, St. Clair Brooks, and the Rev. P. H. Clements, all of Falmouth, and signed by almost every resident of the town, asking the board appropriate $50 to cover compensation insurance for 60 men to complete the town's sewer project. The petition set forth that private individuals had agreed to donate materials while the VERA had agreed to grant $2,000 to pay wages.

The board voted against appropriating $150 to employ a farm demonstrator, as advocated by Grafton Greenlaw and James Quisenberry, of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute Extension Division.

Salisbury' Clock Again on the Job

Salisbury, Md., June 8 (Spl.).—Silent for the first time since its installation in 1888, Salisbury's town clock is again booming out the hours after a rest of three months owing to necessary repairs on the Wicomico County Court House tower.

The clock, by which three generations of citizens have arisen, worked and retired, was the gift of several prominent citizens and for many years was the only "public timepiece" on the entire Eastern shore. It was installed by Charles E. Harper, former mayor of the city, and at the time of its construction a fitting celebration was staged in the Wicomico County seat.

Aside from a brief rest of a half hour in 1932 for the replacement of worn brass bushings, the clock has never been out of commission in the 46 years since its installation and in all that time has never received any other attention than that given it daily by Mr. Harper, its custodian for the entire period of its existence.

Auto-Truck Crash Victims Improving

Two Westminster Women Still in Hospital.

Westminster, Md., June 8 (Spl.).—The most seriously injured of four local residents who were involved in an automobile accident on the Reisterstown road early Monday were said to be improving yesterday.

Mrs. Mary Plummer, who sustained a compound fracture of the right arm, broken nose and lacerations, and Mrs. Rita Shauck, who received seven broken ribs, are still confined at Maryland University Hospital, Baltimore.

Herman Shauck suffered a broken jaw in the crash, while Robert Plummer, the fourth occupant and owner of the car in which they were riding, sustained lacerations about the face and head. The accident occurred when Plummer's machine crashed into a truck at Pleasant Hill.

Loan Is Proposed By West Virginia

Charleston, W. Va., June 8 (Spl.).—Although the West Virginia State treasury has the largest cash balance in many years, $9,316,228, Gov. W. G. Kump announces that it will be necessary to borrow about $2,000,000 to meet the State's needs before July 1.

Gov. Kump says the large cash balance on hand does not constitute a surplus for which there is no need and that the State will be obliged to strain every resource to meet State indebtedness, sinking fund obligations and salaries of school teachers already earned. "Notwithstanding the harassing hours through which we lately have lived," the Governor stated, "the State's fiscal position is satisfactory." He indicated that the necessary borrowing would be for short periods.

The council of the Province of Maryland met at De la Brooke on July 19, 1662. James Thomas, a Governor of Maryland, was born there in 1785. The original house was demolished in 1935. The present house was built in 1836.

Victim of Cancer Given Tent Home

Morgantown, W. Va., June 8 (Spl.).—Because facilities are lacking, Charles Cemo, a jobless miner, dying of cancer, has been given a tent for a home by order of the Mongongalia County court.

The tent was purchased by the county commissioners and erected on the county farm near the county hospital. Cemo, slowly dying from cancer, was placed in it at once. He will receive treatment from the hospital staff and food and other supplies will be given by the institution.

The dying man was under the care of the county relief administration, but the nature of his disease and the lack of necessary facilities made it impossible for the administration to handle him longer. The county commissioners then assumed responsibility.

Bonds Voted In Westminster For Sewerage

$228,000 Issue Will Be Offered at Public Sale June 23.

Westminster, Md., June 8. (Spl.).—An ordinance has been passed by the mayor and council of Westminster providing for issuing bonds totaling $228,000 for the construction of a sewerage system and disposal plant here.

The bonds, which will be dated February 1, 1934, and will be in denomintions of $1,000 each, will be sold at public auction at the Carroll County Courthouse on Saturday, June 23, at 10 a. m.

Bearing 4 per cent interest, payable August 1 and February 1 of each year, the bonds will mature as follows: $10,000 on February 1 in each of the years 1935 to 1939, inclusive; $11,000 on Feburary 1 in each of the years, 1940 to 1944, inclusive; $12,000 on Feburary 1 in each of the years 1945 to 1951, inclusive; and $13,000 on February 1 in each of the years 1952 to 1954, inclusive.

Contract for the project has been awarded to Ligon & Ligon, Baltimore, whose bid was $198,820.30, subject to the receipt of PWA funds which will amount to approximately $81,000.

The only PWA project to be undertaken in the county, construction of the sewerage system has been advocated since 1922 and with Westminster's 5,000 population would have been necessary long before, according to town officials, if Westminster were situated on a level area instead of a ridge, affording natural drainage.

Plans for the project were drafted shortly after the measure was approved at a special election held here last October. The sewerage project was carried by 548 ballots. Westminster's share of the cost will be financed through an increase of 4 or 5 cents in the present tax rate of 62 cents.

It is estimated that the project will furnish 100 men with employment for one year. It will be started about July 1.

Will Face Court June 15 in Fredericksburg; Grand Jury Acts.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 9 (Spl.).—Minor Marshall and Alvin (Horsie) Shelton were indicted yesterday of robbing Archie Williams, colored, of King George County, of $70, by a special grand jury in the Fredericksburg Corporation Court. They will be tried June 15.

The jury included J. Wilmore Cox, foreman; Frank E. Kishpaugh, E. C. Ninde, George W. Freeman, Solly Ventura and Dr. D. C. Bowman.

In the Spotsylvania Circuit Court yesterday Judge Frederick W. Coleman set aside a sentence of three years' imprisonment imposed by a jury on John William Self, convicted of arson in connection with the burning of the Poates barn, on the grounds that evidence did not support the decision.

It is understood that an indictment still pending against Self, a World War veteran, who was cited for heroism in France, will be nolle prossed.

Culpeper Planning To Continue Relief

Refusal to Work Takes Men off Aid Roles.

Culpeper, Va., June 8 (Spl.).—The Culpeper County Board of Supervisors held a joint meeting today with the Town Council of Culpeper to reconsider the order by the board for discontinuance of the Federal Emergency Relief in the county, from July 1 to December 1.

After discussion by county officials and several interested citizens in touch with the welfare board, it was decided that the county relief should be continued on the same lines as ordered by headquarters April 1.

The movement to discontinue relief in the county was meant as a help to the farmers who complained they could not hire labor for farm work while relief was being rendered to the unemployed. Records in the local relief office proved that any person refusing the offer of work of any kind was dropped automatically from the relief rolls.

Relief has been very much curtailed in the matter of clothing and fuel. The matter of food for the unemployed continues to be urgent.

Mrs. Mollie Haines Services Are Held

Winchester, Va., June 8 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Mollie Savage Haines, 68, widow of George A. Haines, were conducted today, with the Rev. W. O. Talbert officiating. Interment was in Mount Hebron Cemetery here.

Roanoke ABC Stores Will Open Wednesday

A consignment of 3,400 cases of whiskies and wines valued at $60,000 is expected here Monday. One of the stores will be located on Jefferson street and one on Salem avenue.

Culpeper to Note 175th Anniversary Of Organization

Culpeper, Va., June 8 (Spl.).—Plans are being drawn for celebration of the 175th anniversary of the laying out of the town of Culpeper, on June 21. Records show that on June 21, 1759, the judge of the court here approved plans showing the streets, courthouse site and jail block, and ordered the same to be filed.

The town was laid off on land donated by Robert Coleman, and later increased by a division given by his son-in-law, Gen. Edward Stevens.

The Culpeper Chamber of Commerce, in commemorating the 175th anniversary, is sponsoring a mail cachet on that date. The design is the old Culpeper courthouse in pre-Civil War days.

The cachet has been announced in several stamp magazines and the secretary of the chamber of commerce, C. N. Goldsborough, has received more than 150 covers to be mailed out on June 21.

Abolition, Changes In Relief Urged

County Officials Reply to Questionnaire.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 8 (Spl.).—Officials of Caroline, Rappahannock, and Loudoun, only nearby counties which at this date have answered a questionnaire distributed by the Virginia Emergency Relief Association to all county supervisors, are unanimously in favor of abolition or modification of relief plans.

Caroline County officials favor discontinuance of all phases of the program except the gardening work. One supervisor reported himself "completely disgusted" with the manner in which relief had been handled both in his own county and Spotsylvania.

Saying the program "has been abused" there, Loudoun authorities suggest discontinuance for the summer months. Rappahannock County wishes to reduce its program by 50 to 75 per cent and "get rid of all the office force."

U. S. Credited With Salvaging Arms Meeting

American Initiative Helps Possibility of Return by Germany.

Geneva, June 8 (U.P.).—American initiative saved the world disarmament conference from collapse again tonight and strengthened possibility of Germany's return to Geneva.

President Roosevelt's roving ambassador and chief arms delegate, Norman H. Davis, acting as peacemaker in a delicate situation, brought the French and British together on a compromise resolution for future procedure in the parley which had been given up for dead.

The Davis plan was submitted to the steering committee of the conference and then to the general commission during a hectic day's negotiations following last night's secret informal session in his hotel room here. The French and British approved it first—and approval by the steerers and then the general commission climaxed 48 hours of strenuous peacemaking efforts on the part of the gray-haired American statesman.

Germany Expected Back.

Despite gloomy reports from Berlin, it was generally believed the resolution would result in Germany's acceptance of the invitation to return to the parley, which she abruptly left last fall, demanding arms equality which France was unwilling to admit.

The compromise followed in general form that of the French plan, but made important gestures to Great Britain, including these major points:

1. Specific mention of Germany's return to Geneva.

2. Specific mention of the necessity of negotiating an agreement on the basis of the 1934 British, French, Italian and German memoranda.

3. Creation of a security commission restricted in composition and scope, to deal only with security pacts.

The delegates agreed that France made considerable concessions to keep arms efforts under the league's auspices alive. She shared with America the honors of the peace move.

The French deleagtion presented the Davis compromise resolution, indicating full approval—even cosponsorship—of the plan. The resolution provides that the parley continues its arms work through four separate committees: 1, to study security; 2, on guarantees of esexution of future arms conventions; 3, aerial disarmament, and 4, regulation of arms traffic as proposed by Davis.

Aerial Attack Limited.

The text contains a footnote declaring that aerial attack on vicilian populations should be prohibited; bombardment from the air be abolished; military aircraft be limited, and civil aircraft be subject to regulation and full publicity.

Arthur Henderson, head of the general commission, said he was satisfied with the amended resolution. French Foreign Minister Louis Barthou declined comment. Davis beamed proudly and said the agreement will be a serious disappointment to people who do not want peace in Europe.

Paris, June 8 (U.P.).—Franco-British reconciliation at Geneva was sealed by the British renewing their invitation to Barthou to go to London to discuss general policies.

Barthou tonight accepted, and will visit London next month. The foreign minister, satisfied with progress at Geneva, is returning to attend a cabinet meeting tomorrow, at which war debts will be discussed.

Candidate Tells Women To Just Raise Babies

Oklahoma City, Okla., June 8 (AP).—Oklahoma's business and professional women's club, intent on pinning candidates for public office down to what they'll do about making it possible for women to hold major State offices, got a tart reply today from a Socialist, who wrote, "Women ought to stay at home and raise babies."

C. S. Millarr, unopposed for the Socialist nomination for the Legislature from the Second Tulsa District, also said he was opposed to women's voting.

Texans Dump Tomatoes In Demanding 2c Price

Jacksonville, Tex., June 8 (AP).—Tomatoes were fed to cattle or left to rot in fields today as East Texas growers refused to sell their product for less than 2 cents a pound. A group of growers seized and dumped 200 bushels awaiting shipment on the Mount Selman Railway platform.

Buyers said competition from Mississippi and the Rio Grande Valley was responsible for the low market.

About 1,000 cars of tomatoes in the immediate vicinity of acksonville alone remained to be shipped.

Pets Strut Today, and Boys Ask Judges to Step Right Up

Dogs, Cats, Cockroaches and Roosters Vie for Prizes.

The Northeast Boys' Club wants a few judges to come around to its gymnasium at 1663 Kraemer street northeast and officiate at its pet show today.

Not, officials want it understood, judges in robes and wigs, caps and gowns. Not judges who smile and say "Case dismissed," or judges who frown and say "ten days, and never throw a brick at a plate glass window again."

What they want are judges who know their pets, and therefore ought to know the pets of the youthful animal fanciers who have entered their charges in the show, which opens at 2 p. m.

As in the sing-song ballad, it will be an animal fair, with birds, beasts and reptiles there!

Leading the procession of entries is a pet goat. That doesn't mean the judges, whoever they are, can be kidded into giving him a decision and a ribbon out of priority.

Two roosters will be his rivals, and a dwarf parrot with a vocabulary not recommended for nurseries, some pet cockroaches, several turtles, a garden snake, many frogs, a few goldfish not at all interested in monetary silver, canaries, pigeons and a trout.

This, of course, doesn't include innumerable nondescript dogs and alley cats.

The show is complete, Director A. Boyd Hinds says, except for the judges. He thinks he can get some, but maybe a few pleasant, animal-conscious judges will have to step up and save the show.

Abduction and Assault Charged in Indictment

Alleged to have jumped on the running board of the automobile of Woody H. Allen, 2127 P street northwest, when he stopped the machine for a traffic light at New Hampshire and Virginia avenues northwest, James Abbott Riggsbee was indicted by the grand jury yesterday on charges of abdduction and assault with intent to rob.

After stopping Allen, the grand jury charged, Riggsbee and an unidentified companion forced Allen to drive them to Pohick, Va., where the car became mired in the mud. While the alleged abductors were pushing the car out Allen fled.

Business Peak Went in April, Says A. F. of L.

Gloomy, Forecast Asserts Nation's Confidence Has Collapsed.

(Associated Press.)

The American Federation of Labor's monthly survey of business said yesterday that "business passed its spring peak in April and declines during May have been obvious," linking this with a statement that "in the last month confidence has collapsed."

The survey said the Administration had hoped that private initiative in business would replace Government bolstering during the spring.

"It is clear, with the end of spring activity, however," the report said, "that business is not yet ready to go ahead on its own and must still depend upon Government funds. In the last month, business confidence has collapsed and many firms are reducing their activities to the barest minimum."

The reasons for the loss of confidence, the Federation said, included the fact that business men saw no opportunity for large profits; regulations of industry by codes and regulation of the stock market and other similar legislation and "the lack of any satisfactory agency with authority to adjust labor difficulties."

"There is yet no general recognition of the fact that in this era of large scale machine production," the summary said, "regulation is essential for the very existence of our present economic order."

"Business observers generally feel," the summary said, "that a decline slightly more than seasonal may be expected, and that it will last until late summer. The drought situation, however, threatens a National catastrophe unless we have rain in the next few weeks. Government relief will restore a portion of the farmers' income, but with nearly one-third of the country already affected (Idaho east to Minnesota and south to Texas) and the drought spreading, business as a whole is bound to be influenced."

Unemployment centered in the construction and heavy goods groups, over 3,300,000 in these industries being unemployed, the report said.

Nazi-House Committee Moves Inquiry to N. Y.

The special House committee investigating Nazi activities and alleged subversive alien propaganda transferred its activities to New York today.

Representative Dickstein (Democrat), New York, was appointed a special sub-committee of one to inquire into allegations that Ivy Lee, nationally known publicist, is a paid propagandist for the Soviet government. Among a number of witnesses to be questioned in secret is George Sylvester Viereck, author and biographer.

It is the mind and the use of the mind that makes a man a man. No one can master other things until he has first learned how to master himself. To accomplish this he must learn how to control his mind, for mind is everything. The great need of the present hour is to teach people how to think constructively. Most people do not even try to control their thoughts—they rush headlong like a herd of wild stampeding cattle to their destruction.

State Bankers Vote Virginia Control Body

Fair Practice Code Will Be Administered by Clearing House.

Virginia Beach, Va., June 8 (Spl.). By an overwhelming vote the Virginia Bankers Association, in convention here today, adopted a round-table resolution for the establishment of a State control body or clearing house association, of which officers of the State organization will be the officers. This body will administer a fair practice code and establish a minimum State-wide service charge for all banks in the State.

The basic minimum charge will be 50 cents for accounts averaging a balance of $50 a month, with an allowance of five checks a month without additional charge. Any bank or group of banks may make higher charges in their discretion.

Officers and members of the executive council were nominated by a committee and will be elected at tomorrow's closing session without opposition. They are: President, Carroll Pierce, of Alexandria; vice president, Col. J. Sinclair Brown, of Salem, Speaker of the House of Delegates; secretary, C. W. Beerbower, of Roanoke; treasurer, Thomas D. Hanes, of Winston-Salem, N. C. Mr. Spencer heads the committee that has been working on a code of fair practices recommended by the NRA and service charge shedules for the last year.

Other reports today included those of the committee on State legislation by W. S. Irby, Kenbridge, chairman; on Federal legislation, by C. E. Tiffany, Warrenton; on groups, by Carroll Pierce, Alexandria; on banking education, by E. A. Dinwiddie, Charlottesville; on county organization, Giles H. Others named as vice presidents for the State in the National association were R. L. Burke, of Alexandria, State bank division; H. E. # Franciscan Sister Given Leper Post

Norfolk Woman Realizes Ambition.

Norfolk, Va., June 8 (Spl.).—Wishes of Sister M. Martini, of the Franciscan Order and for the last two years on the faculty of St. Joseph's School here, that she might serve in a leper colony will be realized shortly.

Sister Martini left Norfolk tonight to visit relatives in New Jersey, after which she will sail from New York June 16 to her hazardous station in Uganda, British East Africa.

Sister Martini is a volunteer for service among the lepers. "We are not required to go if we do not wish to," she emphasized, as did Mother Superior Viridian, in charge of St. Joseph's School. She will be joined by Sister Mary Anna, from Richmond, and four other sisters from the mother house.

House Members Are Unopposed

Democratic Incumbents Seek Reelection.

Richmond, June 8 (AP).—The Democratic congressional primary lists are closing in Virginia today, with no opposition registered against incumbents.

Eight of the nine representatives have filed with the State treasurer. The ninth, John W. Flannagan, of the Ninth District, has been nominated by convention, and is not subject to the prithary.

Unless opponents file before midnight, the incumbents will be declared the party nominees and a congressional primary in August will not be necessary, since Senator Harry F. Byrd also is without party opposition.

Britain Will Send Warship To Tercentenary Celebration

Cruiser Dundee to Take Part in Rites at St. Mary's City.

Baltimore, June 8 (Spl.).—A British warship will represent the government of England at St. Marys City, Md., during the tercentenary celebration, it was announced today by Swepson Earle, State conservation commissioner and fleet comander for the tercentenary commission.

The vessel will lie at anchor in the St. Marys River during the celebration of Maryland's 300th birthday on June 15 and 16.

She is the cruiser Dundee. Mr. Earle said he had been informed by the British Embassy in Washington that she will arrive in Maryland waters from Bermuda on June 14. She will leave June 18.

Mr. Earle said he had written a letter to the British Admiralty two months ago inviting the Crown to send a ship to the tercentenary fete. He said the presence of a modern war vessel at St. Marys at the same time that the replica of the Ark and the Dove, seventeenth century ships which brought the first Maryland colonists to these shores, sail into the harbor, should provide an interesting contrast.

A delegation from the Maryland tercentenary commission and the United States Navy will greet the commanding officer of the Dundee when she drops anchor, Mr. Earle said.

Liquor License Rules for Clubs Are Prescribed

Virginia Board to Study All Applications for Privilege.

Richmond, June 8 (Spl.)—With a number of applications for club licenses, the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board today declared that applicants must furnish a copy of its charter, by-laws, stock certificates and list of officers and an affidavit certifying that the club is a non-profit and operated only for the benefit of members.

The board desires to give privileges embodied in club licenses to bona-fide clubs, but wants to be sure that the clubs are operating for legitimate purposes.

Under the A.B.C. law, club members may have hard liquor served from their lockers. Clubs are the only places besides private homes where hard liquor can be served by the drink.

The board announced today that a state store would be opened tomorrow at Hot Springs. Two Roanoke stores will open Wednesday. The two Lynchburg stores will be ready for business Friday or Saturday, it was stated.

Norfolk, Va., June 8 (Spl.)—A new bootlegging situation which, police say, they are practically powerless to combat has arisen in Norfolk since opening of the A.B.C. stores, it developed today. Bootleggers were reported purchasing A.B.C. liquor, storing it and making deliveries after the stores have closed.

Harrisonburg Degrees to 191

Commencement Exercises at Teachers College to Close Monday.

Harrisonburg, Va., June 8 (Spl.). With the close today of final examinations at the Harrisonburg State Teachers College, the twenty-fifth commencement program was initiated.

This program will culminate Monday evening when the college will grant bachelor of science degrees to 113 students, and professional diplomas and certificates to 78 applicants.

Events start this evening with a garden party on the lawn of Hillcrest, home of President Samuel P. Duke, and a recital afterward in Wilson Hall by the departments of music and expression.

Tomorrow the Alumnae Association will hold a business meeting and a luncheon at which about 125 persons will be present. Freshmen Field Day also is scheduled Saturday morning, and the senior-sophomore production of J. M. Barrie's humorous play, "Alice Sit By the Fire," for the evening.

The program for Sunday comprises the baccalaureate service in the morning and the Y. M. C. A. service in the evening. Dr. Ernest Trice Thompson, of the Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, will speak on both occasions.

Monday, closing day, starts with class day exercises in the morning, continues with a reception in the afternoon, and concludes with final graduation ceremonies in the evening. The commencement address will be given by Dr. Samuel C. Mitchell, of the University of Richmond.

Hagerstown Graves Robbed of Flowers

Hagerstown, Md., June 8 (Spl.). Complaints of graves being stripped of flowers and other ornaments in local cemeteries have been made to police.

Two women were caught in a cemetery yesterday soon after a funeral procesison had left, removing ribbons from wreaths and ornamental baskets which contained flowers, but were not prosecuted. Some months ago the police received complaints of flowers being taken from graves.

Virginia Wins Truck Accord With Georgia

Promise of License Peace Follows Stopping of Drivers.

Richmond, June 8 (AP).—Virginia's stop-truck method of forcing a truck license reciprocal agreement with Georgia and Florida today worked so far as Georgia was concerned, and Virginia authorities expressed hope that favorable action would be forthcoming in Florida.

As 40 or more detained Georgia and Florida truck drivers swarmed into the Virginia Governor's office with a single cry, "We want to go home," Gov. Talmadge of Georgia communicated to Gov. Peery a statement that Georgia would extend to Virginia drivers whatever courtesy Virginia gives truckmen from Georgia.

With that promise, Motor Vehicle Director John Q. Rhodes lifted his order stopping southbound trucks from both Georgia and Florida.

"Although we have had no definite word from Florida, we are permitting truckmen from both of these States to pass on, with the hope that some satisfactory arrangement can be reached with Florida authorities as well as those in Georgia," Mr. Rhodes said. "The trucks will not be stopped again until we definitely learn what is to be done by those States.

"We have been able to secure no reciprocal agreements hitherto with Georgia. Virginia truck drivers operating through that State are forced to produce Georgia licenses. In Florida, only those Virginia trucks hauling household furnishing, and fruits and vegetables are allowed to operate without Florida licenses, and Virginia truckers do not haul fruits and vegetables to Florida.

"So after concluding that it was only fair to Virginia truckmen that we should impose upon drivers from other States the same requirements made of Virginians in those respective States, we last night began stopping southbound trucks bearing Georgia and Florida licenses. No truck loaded with northbound produce was stopped."

Virginia has reciprocal agreements with the Carolinas, West Virginia, Tennessee and several other States.

Husband's Liberal Views on Wedlock Get Wife Divorce

New Haven, Conn., June 8 (AP). Mrs. Martha Gleaton, of this city, was granted a divorce today in Superior Court from Munsey S. Gleaton, a graduate of the Yale Divinity School and former Y. M. C. A. worker, on grounds of intolerable cruelty.

She testified her husband's liberal views on marriage drove her to desperation and nearly caused a serious illness.

Mrs. Gleaton said her husband is now treasurer of a Communist organization and is located in Toledo, Ohio, where he has been engaged in strike activities.

At one time, she said, Gleaton held a position at Washington and Lee University in Lexington, Va., but that he soon was in trouble owing to his views on sex.

Ritchie Fights Issue of Bonds To Aid Jobless

Urges Some Other Means to Provide State's $9,000,000.

Baltimore, June 8 (Spl.).—Issuance of State bonds to raise relief funds in Maryland during the next 12 months was opposed by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie today.

"Whatever the method adopted, it is my judgment that State bonds for these purposes should not be considered," the Governor told a group of civic and welfare officials who had gathered at his office here to consider the relief situation.

Representatives from every section of the State were at the session, invited by the Governor to study ways and means of raising Maryland's half of the $18,000,000 estimated to be needed for relief payments to the jobless during the coming year.

Seeks to Reduce Cost.

The Governor told the officials that it must be decided whether the needed money is to be raised by the respective political units where the funds are to be used or whether the State, through other sources of revenue or through new taxation, should raise the entire amount and distribute it according to the needs of the various sections.

"The first question will be to determine whether the $18,000,000 represents a reliable estimate of Maryland's needs during the coming year, or whether that sum can be reduced," the Governor said.

"This is, of course, an extremely important question. It involves the case load, the standards of relief, and the costs of administration. It is necessary that these three factors be thoroughly examined.

State Wants Bigger Voice.

"It seems to me that if Maryland is to assume the obligation of paying half the total cost of relief, then Maryland, or its political units, ought to be permitted to establish standards of their own as well as the costs of administration."

The estimate of $18,000,000 for relief work in Maryland was made by Harry L. Hopkins, National relief administrator. He told the Governor two weeks ago that the Federal Government would provide half the fund if Maryland would provide the remaining $9,000,000.

If the estimated sum can be reduced, Maryland's share would be less and so would be the Federal Government's. The meeting today was called to determine how the cost could be reduced.

W. & M. Choice Urged at Once

Another Faction Wants No Immediate Action on Presidency.

Richmond, June 8 (Spl.).—With one faction driving for immediate action in the selection of a president to succeed the late Dr. J. A. C. Chandler, at the College of William and Mary, and another strong one counseling deliberation, the board of visitors of the college gathered at Williamsburg today for a routine business meeting which will be followed by a general session tomorrow afternoon on the question of a new president.

The group urging prompt action includes advocates of the candidacy of Dr. Sidney B. Hall, superintendent of public instruction, who now is reported to have the inside track.

The Washington (D. C.) Alumni Chapter, which includes among its members Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, has wired the board asking that no hasty action be taken. The Williamsburg Chapter took similar action and has communicated with the board. The Richmond and Newport News Chapters, on the other hand, urged that the board not delay.

Advocates of prompt action argue that the college has not elected its faculty nor completed its catalogue for the new term, and that unless a president is chosen before July 1, the 1934-35 session will be placed under a grave handicap.

Coastal Artillery Roars in Practice

Fort Monroe, Va., June 8 (Spl.).—War-like conditions prevailed in Hampton Roads and at Fort Story today when guns roared as they hurled tons of steel projectiles at imaginary warships.

The firing began at 9 a. m., and except at intervals when visibility was not good, continued until 4 p. m. The guns included the 8-inch railway battery and the 155-millimeter type. Targets towed at various points drew the fire of the shore batteries.

The practice will mark the conclusion of a month of intensive coast defense training for student officers of the Fort Monroe Coast Artillery School.

Liquor Store Opening Awaits Supply Plan

Fredericksburg, Va., June 8 (Spl.).—The opening of the Fredericksburg State Alcoholic Beverage Dispensary is now awaiting decision by the Alcoholic Control Board whether to store goods here or keep the local dispensary supplied by truck shipments from Richmond.

James E. Ethridge, real estate director of the board, has narrowed choice of a local store down to two locations, and final choice depends on the eventual decision of the board about storage facilities.

Truck Crash Victim Dies.

Garden of Eden in Suit Assets

Site of Babylon's Hanging Garden Also Tied Up in Litigation by Virginian Who Claims Swindle of $2,300,000.

Richmond, June 8 (AP).—The reputed sites of the Garden of Eden and the hanging gardens of Babylon are among the assets tied up in the receivership secured in the City Circuit Court here by John De Kay, a Virginian, who claims he was swindled out of a $3,300,000 stock interest in the vast estates of the late Sultan of Turkey.

The court granted the receivership against the Ottoman Imperial Estates.

De Kay said he advanced $75,000 to promote the Virginia company that took over from 17 of the late Sultan's 21 heirs-at-law the control of millions of acres of oil and mining lands and irrigation farms in the Ottoman empire, as well as all the land along the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers, fabled site of the Garden of Eden.

In return, he received 33,000 of the 50,000 shares of the $100 par value capital stock of the Ottoman Imperial Estates, Inc., organized in Virginia in 1922. He later deposited his stock and all the records of the company with W. G. Deussen, of Salzburg, Austria, De Kay said, claiming he was to receive 75 per cent of the dividends of his stock until they reached $10,000,000.

De Kay said that Deussen was understood to be in a Switzerland jail. He said that the records of the company and De Kay's stock, which were deposited in the Swiss criminal court, were fraudulently obtained by a lawyer and turned over to the Bank of Montreal in Paris.

Charters of the Ottoman Imperial Estates, Inc., and the Sultan Abdul Hamid Estates, Inc., both Virginia corporations, expired, but on May 31, the day De Kay filed his original suit in the court here, a check for $5,000 was given the State corporation commission to renew the charter of the former corporation. The State of Virginia holds $75,000 of the gold notes of the Ottoman Imperial Estates, Inc., as security for delinquent taxes on the two corporations.

Federal Relief Strike Settled At Hagerstown

Mayor Wertz's Plea Ends Walkout Over Cut in Hours.

Hagerstown, Md., June 8 (Spl.). Several hundred Federal workers engaged on three local projects who went on strike today because of a reduction of work hours returned to work later in the day after being addressed by Mayor I. M. Wertz.

The new work schedule, which called for a 20 per cent reduction in the work week of 21 hours, became effective today. The men reported for work, but when informed of the reduction laid down their tools and marched to the Y. M. C. A., Federal works headquarters here.

Mayor Wertz suggested that two representatives from each project be selected and appear Monday night before the local welfare board. It was explained by welfare officials that the reduction was due to the uncertainty of Federal funds and desire to spread out the work among as many needy family heads as possible.

The workers were engaged on two street projects and the Hagerstown Airport, which is being enlarged and graded.

V.P.I. "Rat" System Will Be Abolished

Cadets Follow Similar Action at V. M. I.

Blacksburg, Va., June 8 (AP).—Gordon Wildes, of Oxford, N. C., president of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, cadet corps, announced today that the corps by unanimous vote had decided to abolish the "rat" system of freshmen discipline.

The action came just two months after the Virginia Military Institute cadet corps by almost unanimous vote decided to abolish its "rat" system. Cadet Wildes said the decision to do away with the system was reached at a meeting of the corps Wednesday night.

The administration of all discipline has been taken out of the hands of the sophomore class and placed in the hands of the seniors. Discipline actually is maintained by the captain of each company who can send continual violators before a committee.

Lynchburg Judge Fines Slot Machine Owner

Lynchburg, Va., June 8 (AP).—Slot machines were definitely labeled gambling devices per se today by Judge J. P. McCarron in Municipal Court, when he fined E. P. Patterson $25 and costs for having two machines in a restaurant.

Attorney for the defense received permission to have until Monday to decide whether he will appeal.

G. O. P. Wants Goldsborough For Governor

Leaders Reported Ready to Ask Him to Quit Senate Seat.

Republican leaders in Maryland were reported today to be preparing to urge United States Senator Phillip Lee Goldsborough to retire from the Senate and run for the G. O. P. nomintion for Governor.

That such action has been contemplated by the party chieftains has been known for some time, but today it was said they are virtually agreed to ask Senator Goldsborough.

Questioned about the reports today, Senator Goldsborough said he was aware that the subject had been discussed of late.

"I can make no comment on it, however, because things have not yet reached that stage," the Senator said. He added that he has not yet made any decision.

His entry would precipitate a Republican primary almost as bitter as the Democratic contest, it is generally agreed, unless some of those already in the field withdraw. These include Harry W. Nice, H. Webster Smith, Harry Phoebus, of Princess Anne, and Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt, of Annapolis. Mr. Nice and Mr. Smith are by far the most active, the others having not yet started their campaigns.

Senator Goldsborough's entry, if he does so decide, probably would mean that former Representative John Philip Hill, of Baltimore, would run for the Senatorial nomination.

Kin of Calverts Plans Maryland Marriage Today

Nice Candidacy Approval Gets G. O. P. Attack

Washington County Chiefs Failed to Attend Meeting.

Hagerstown, Md., June 8 (Spl.).—Indorsement of the candidacy of Harry N. Nice, Baltimore, for the Republican nomination for Governor by the Sixth District Republican committee does not necessarily mean that the Nice candidacy has been indorsed by Washington County Republican leaders, it was stated today by a number who were conspicuous by their absence at the meeting last night.

There was only one member of the Republican central committee of the county at the meeting.

The resolution indorsing Nice, which was introduced by Reno Harp, Frederick, was approved after two of the delegates protested the resolution on the grounds that the club "was organized to oppose Democrats and not Republicans," and that participation in a primary campaign would destroy harmony.

The resolution, as adopted, said that "we feel that the sentiment in favor of the nomination of Mr. Nice is predominant in western Maryland. Our opinion is based upon information received through personal contact with and letters from leading Republicans and party workers."

The resolution urged that other candidates join in nominating Nice.

The following county representatives were present:

Montgomery—Paul M. Caughlan, Walter Dawson, Thomas Dawson and Harold C. Smith. Frederick—Reno S. Harp, Charles F. Goodell, G. Edwin Myers, E. Austin James and William B. Cutshall, Charles A. Open and Charles W. Crum. Allegheny—J. Milton Patterson, Senator J. Glenn Beall, William Rankin and Somerville Nicholson. Washington—Ellsworth R. Roulette, Elmer Carl, Edwin S. Guth, Russell Geeting, Lancelot Jacques, John D. Dunn and Dr. I. M. Wertz.

FERA Funds Aid Hundreds At University

Many Enabled to Take Degrees Through Part-Time Jobs.

By Howard Turner.

Charlottesville, Va., June 8.—The National program inaugurated in February by the FERA for part-time employment of college students has enabled hundreds of University of Virginia students to complete this year, and in many cases to graduate.

The program has been carried on under the supervision of Charles H. Kauffmann, of the extension department, who was placed in charge of the student self-help bureau.

The bureau made a hurried survey of existing possibilities for work immediately after relief funds were made available, and directed the employment of the most needy students. Earnings were limited to $15 per month.

Most of the jobs were found in the libraries, laboratories and professors' offices. Specially trained men were given employment as research and technical assistants in the professional departments.

Much Accomplished.

Much has been accomplished for both the university and the students. Numerous objects which had been suspended owing to lack of funds were renewed and completed, and the students benefited by a great deal of practical experience, in addition to supportnig themselves in school.

The student viewpoint of the relief work is contained in the report of Harry King, of Pearisburg, Va., who was employed as a reporter for the University News Service.

"During the days when applications were being received," he writes, "the employment line formed in the Self-Help Bureau office, while Mr. Kauffman and his assistants interviewed the applicants. Now and then he would ask, 'well, what do you need work for?' Once he demanded this without looking up at the applicant.

Need It to Eat.

"'Please, mister,' was the reply, 'I need it to eat.'

"It takes things like that," the report continues, "to make one realize the benefits derived from this employment program. Eating more and oftener is one of the things some students have been doing since the first FERA check.

"Two boys who live in a small basement room, where they cook on an oil stove vegetables and meat sent from home, admitted that their FERA check gave them the first 'square meal' had at the university this year."

State Wins Appeal In Road Site Fight

Act of 1846 to Be Weighed in Higher Court.

Wytheville, Va., June 8 (AP).—Another chapter was written today in the long controversy over the State Highway Department's effort to claim land at Troutville designated 88 years ago by an act of the Legislature as a road right-of-way, when the Supreme Court of Appeals granted the Commonwealth an appeal from a decision of the lower court in favor of T. D. Kinzie.

The highway department claimed title to land along the Lee highway at Troutville and sought to force property owners to move their fences and buildings off the land. A test case was brought against T. D. Kinzie, the highway department basing its claim to a 60-foot right-of-way on an act of 1846 establishing the Southwestern turnpike.

Judge A. C. Buchanan, of the Tazewell Circuit Court, was designated to hear the case and ruled in favor of Kinzie. The lower court held in effect that the State had no title to the land under the 88-year-old act. The State had claimed that the present Lee highway followed the route of the old Rock road, asserted to have been the location of the original Southwestern turnpike.

Plans Are Drafted To Boost Highway

Frederick Merchants Told of Route 40 Program.

Frederick, Md., June 8 (Spl.)—A tentative program to exploit U. S. Route 40, known as the old National highway, was placed before a meetng of business men sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce last night.

The purpose of the organization is to promote traffic over the highway. Historical points will be marked and signs erected conveying information to tourists. It is planned to divide the highway into ten sections of about 100 miles each with a governing body for each section to keep the advantages of traveling over the road before the public.

No action was taken, the meeting being intended only to familariize business men with plans. Wagon trains from the West passed through Frederick over the route of No. 40 to the valley of Virginia and points south and east before the Revolutionary war.

Buckhannon Citizen Falls Dead in Florida

Buckhannon, W. Va., June 8 (Spl.).—Frank Raymond Ast, 58, of this city, traveling salesman for a Baltimore dry goods concern, fell dead lest avening at the home of a sister-in-law, Mrs. R. H. Parker, at St. Petersburg, Fla., after traveling by an automobile from Miami. A heart attack was the cause.

Ast, a native of Staunton, Va., was affiliated with numerous organizations here. He is survived by his widow, formerly Miss Irma Withers, of Buckhannon, and a daughter, Virginia. The body will be brought here Monday.

A State Of Mind.

While a House committee is delving into the ramifications of Nazi propaganda in this country, London can thank the same motivating force for one of the noisiest political demonstrations since the General Strike. A huge Fascist rally in Olympia Hall led naturally to vigorous rioting, despite the organized defense of the hall made by Sir Oswald Mosley's black-shirted "storm troops." The meeting and its outcome is not without its significance for the American scene.

The fact that Sir Oswald could attract some 12,000 persons shows that among certain groups, his primitive political ideas have gained more headway than admirers of British institutions would like to believe. In every country there is always a group of individuals ready to be swayed by an appeal for dictatorship, if the appeal is garbed in black, khaki, red or silver shirts and plays sufficiently upon childish emotions and prejudices. Sir Oswald, who was at first given a ruddy British horse-laugh, has now attained the eminence of being a public nuisance. Hence the unusual strong-arm tactics employed against his followers by those who know that they would be the first to be prosecuted by a Fascist regime.

If the completely un-English ideals of Fascism can make some headway in Great Britain, as obviously they have, there is no reason to believe that, given a chance, they might not also take root in the United States. Present-day willingness to let the Federal Government take over all sorts of responsibilities for which it was never designed provide an ever-present instance of a public psychology helpful to Fascist principles. And moronic though the Silver Shirts movement may be, the Fascist trend itself has cut deeper than many suspect. It is, in the final analysis, a state of mind, encouraged everywhere by a surrender of individual responsibility to centralized dictation. And a state of mind is harder to counteract than the outspoken propaganda of paid agents.

To Aid Alley Clearance.

Senator King's bill to permit "excess condemnation" of land for public purposes has acquired additional importance because of the alley clearance program. Under the present law the District may take over through condemnation proceedings only property which is actually needed for the projects in question. As a result losses are sometimes inflicted on property owners and the District is unable to provide appropriate surroundings for municipal buildings, schools, &c.

Enactment of the King bill would permit the alley clearance authority to take over all of the property in the slum areas designated for improvement. If any such land should prove to be unnecessary for the subsequent development of low-cost housing projects, it could be disposed of. But the authority would not be hampered in its important undertaking by the narrow restrictions of the present law.

The measure is intended to protect property owners as much as to facilitate the orderly development of public projects. When streets are widened, for example, abutting homeowners would not be forced to give up their front yards for insignificant sums not representing the actual damage done to their property. In such cases the entire lots could be taken over.

By passing this bill, in spite of the pressure of National legislation, the Senate has recognized its importance. Early consideration by the House would substantially aid the alley-elimination project, already approved by both houses of Congress.

Six Billion Dollars.

The technical subcommittee of the Commission of National Defense Expenditure of the League of Nations, after an exhaustive inquiry, has revealed that the world spent $6,000,000,000 on armaments in 1931. That sum is something more than 1,000 times the total expenditures of the League of Nations, the International Labor Office and the World Court for that year. So the odds have been somewhat weighted against Geneva.

Two Poles, a Japanese, an Italian, a Frenchman, an Englishman, and an Indian were the personnel of the committee which examined budgets of all governments represented at the disarmament conference. The object of their work was to decide how international publicity might be applied to armaments, and how limitation of military budgets might be brought about.

It concluded publicity was possible and useful. It also found that reservations against the principles of budgetary arms limitation, made by the United States, Japan, Italy and Germany, hampered its work. Nevertheless, it carefully scrutinized the books of 60 countries, representing 90 per cent of the world's military expenditures and added up the astounding total.

Six billion dollars is a lot of money to be spent for national defense in a peaceful year. Undoubtedly the total has increased since 1931. No wonder peace-loving people are alarmed, talk about the "merchants of death" and demand universally that "something be done about it."

The League committee is probably right in suggesting that the most effective means of combating increased armaments is by the judicious use of publicity. If we assume that sanity is a predominant human characteristic, it is difficult to believe that mankind, once it realized the cost, would continue to utilize its hard-earned wealth in this socially useless fashion.

Why The Delay?

One of the most effective statements contained in the "declaration of policy" adopted by the Republican National Committee at Chicago was the frank admission that "Our country has been backward in legislation dealing with social questions. We welcome the recognition that these questions demand attention by government."

This backwardness is in large part, of course, a responsibility of the Republican party itself. During the Harding, Coolidge and early Hoover administrations, when other industrial nations were concentrating on the development of forms of social insurance, and when conditions in this country were ideal for their initiation, no lead in this direction was forthcoming from the G. O. P. And it may be reasonably contended that one reason for the debauchery of doles in which the present Administration has indulged was the absence of any scientific defense mechanism developed against the ravages of unemployment at a time when such a program could have been so easily prepared.

President Roosevelt, however, has failed signally to improve on the shortcomings evidenced in this respect by his predecessors. In spite of much lip service to the need for planning in the field of social legislation, its development today is almost as rudimentary as was the case on March 4, 1933. Billions have been spent upon wasteful emergency relief schemes of one form or another, but the creation of careful permanent machinery has been virtually ignored. Fifteen months of the New Deal sees us no further forward in the development of unemployment insurance. And the Federal Employment Service can count itself lucky that its trifling appropriation was not cut in half, as the House voted to do, because its director had insisted on staffing his offices with trained personnel workers instead of with political henchmen.

So the President's message on social legislation, aside from the fact that it seems largely concerned with avoiding specific proposals, comes pitifully late. It is good to know that at last the Administration has "commenced to make" the necessary actuarial and other studies for developing social insurance. It is welcome news that the system contemplated will be cooperative between the States and the Federal Government—not a purely centralized bureaucracy. Finally it is of course sound that whatever is done in this field should be, so far as possible, on the principle of contribution from insured persons and their employers. But when all that is said—and most of it has been said already in legislation presented to Congress but not pressed by the Administration—the unanswered question is why this program has been so subordinated to our astounding galaxy of impulsive panaceas.

In the words of the President, "Next winter we may well undertake the great task of furthering the security of the citizen and his family through social insurance."

If next winter, it is appropriate to ask, why not as far back as March of 1933?

Profiting From Mistakes.

The decision to abandon most of the price-fixing provisions of the codes is a wise move which shows that the NRA is responsive to criticism and ready to retreat from an untenable position. Price fixing under the codes has assumed many different guises. In a few instances, specific price schedules have been approved; in other cases, open price agreements have been made a screen to establish price uniformity. Organized control over output has also acted as an indirect price-raising expedient, while in many instances prohibitions against selling below cost have been inserted in the codes.

The failure of the NRA price-fixing policies is due to the fact that they have not been based upon any consistent or carefully thought-out principles. The authorities have acted hastily and have approved policies that are socially harmful and often impossible of enforcement. In many cases, the aim has been to establish prices that will yield a profit to all organized members of an industry, with the result that the high-cost producer sets the standards for all. Price fixing of this sort tends to perpetuate inefficiency, results in exploitation of consumers, and interferes with industrial progress, which depends upon competitive elimination of the unfit.

On the other hand, abolition of all price fixing would make it impossible to prevent those forms of unfair price cutting which the codes were designed to abolish. The prevention of "wilfully destructive price cutting" is therefore forbidden, and in an emergency, the Administrator is given the power to fix minimum prices after investigation.

Industries are also encouraged to utilize cost-finding and accounting systems, which provide safeguards against sales below cost due to ignorance of those costs. It is not intended, however, to make acceptance of standard cost-accounting systems obligatory or to permit them to be used as a disguise for controlling sales prices. The value of an accurate system of cost accounting lies in the guidance which it gives the individual producer. It can not be applied to determine a "fair cost-fair price" system for an entire industry. Certainly it offers no protection against sales below cost if overproduction occurs for reasons that could not be foreseen.

Evidently the NRA officials have profited by their experimental efforts to establish control over prices by agreement. They do not, like representatives of the AAA, demand more power when their efforts prove abortive. Instead they proceed to surrender rights of control that have proved to be either undesirable or impossible of enforcement. The chances of successful accomplishment within a restricted field are greatly improved by this willingness to profit by past mistakes.

By Way Of Reprisal?

Senator Harrison has introduced a resolution which would authorize the Treasury to withhold payments to German nationals under the Settlement of War Claims Act of 1928 until Germany has tried to satisfy American claims under the 1930 debt agreement.

By withholding these payments, the United States Government can not, of course, force the German Government to pay us, because in the present disordered state of the German international balance of payments, fulfillment of the agreement has become impossible. The proposal in reality is to deprive citizens of Germany of compensation for losses suffered as a result of the war, because their government is unable to meet its obligations.

If we believe that private property should not be taken without compensation to owners, either in times of war or peace, there would seem to be no justification for withholding compensation from Germans who have established their right to damages. Such a policy would be equivalent to applying private property to the satisfaction of public indebtedness. It is not only contrary to our professed principles, but it is a form of petty reprisal that aggravates the existing tension produced by maladroit handling of international debt problems.

Quoth The Raven.

Come to think of it, it is rather unusual that the movie magnates did not descend upon Poe's Raven earlier as fit subject for filming. It has all the elements for a marvelous horror picture that should transcend anything yet given to the public. In fact, now that we look into the matter, it rather seems that Poe must have had the movies, if anything, in mind when he wrote the strange verses. From "each separate dying ember" that "wrought its ghost upon the floor" to the poor poet's soul "that shall be lifted—nevermore!" the poem, in the hands of the magnates, ought easily to fill the public with fantastic terrors also never felt before.

Just who will take the part of the Raven itself has not been announced. Now that Lon Chaney is dead these many years it is rather difficult to imagine which of Hollywood's actors will attempt to perch upon the bust of Pallas just above the chamber door. On the strength of what the Raven did, however—"perched and sat and nothing more"—we are unkind enough to suggest there are innumerable actors quite suited to that part. But, aside from the cast, and seriously, in the hands of a capable director "The Raven" opens up new possibilities for the screen.

Deep into that darkness peering, long
I stood there, wondering, fearing,
Doubting, dreaming dreams no mortal ever dreamed before . . .

From this beginning the horror picture of horror pictures might well be built, for in the poem "unmerciful disaster," if you recall, "followed fast and followed faster," a perfect set-up, in other words, for the films. Certainly it lends itself better to the cinematic art than "Great Expectations," also announced for the coming season. But even above "The Raven" or this Dickens film must be placed "The Mystery of Edwin Drood," as meat for the movie magnates. They only have to follow the original for a few scenes and then end it as they see fit. None can accuse them of infidelity to the original. None can curse them for adding a false ending, as has happened to so many adaptations in the past. For "Edwin Drood" is the pluperfect movie mystery original—Dickens did not live to write an ending for the movies to spoil with sweetness and light!

We've observed that the driver who is in the biggest hurry to get somewhere has the least to do when he arrives.

We don't worry about posterity. Our progenitors worried about us, and how much good did it do?

It's much easier to be prejudiced than to learn enough about a subject to form an honest opinion.

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

IN A series of decisions the Supreme Court outlined material which was thought might be advantageously embodied in a new textbook on the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce. The Shreveport rate case, the Los Angeles switching case and the Georgia headlight case led the court to analyze and discuss the powers conferred on Congress under the commerce clause of the Constitution.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

ON THE eve of the opening of the Republican National convention at Cleveland, Ohio, the question of deciding upon a Vice Presidential nominee developed. Among the prospects were Gen. Charles G. Dawes, Senator William E. Borah, Senator Charles Curtis, Senator James E. Watson, Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover and Gov. Arthur Hyde of Missouri.

THE ADJOURNMENT of the first session of the Sixty-eighth Congress left a calendar crowded with important issues, domestic and foreign, to be taken up in the short December session. Among the outstanding issues carried over were farm relief, Muscle Shoals, world court, treaties, reclamation and the dry laws.

WOMEN ADVOCATES and opponents of the proposed Constitutional amendment to give equal rights before the law to men and women pitched camp at Cleveland and then the fun began. Miss Alice Paul and Miss Maude Younger, former leaders of the White House suffrage pickets, led the shock troops for the amendment.

Navy Pilots.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue June 8 appeared an article which pointed out that a serious shortage of airplane pilots exists in the Navy. For this reason, the article says, "changes must be made in the method of selecting and training pilots to provide the necessary number. . . . More liberal provisions have been made for enlisted men and reserve officers to train at the flying school at Pensacola."

If this condition is true, why cannot reserve pilots be assigned to active duty to bring the commissioned pilot strength of the Navy up to the figure set by officials as standard?

Throughout the country, and particularly in Washington, are many reserve officers who have been trained at Pensacola and who have been on active service with the fleet. Many of them continue to drill with reserve units, and at the naval air station at Anacostia, and would welcome an opportunity to take active duty.

This situation was particularly evident within recent weeks when it was announced that some reserve Navy pilots would be assigned to service with the Coast Guard. An overwhelming proportion of reserve pilots immediately put in applications for the service, and enlisted every variety of political "pull," in addition, to secure assignment.

These men are Navy-trained. They are expert pilots and meet every physical requirement. If there is a shortage, why could not some of these men be used to make up the deficiency? G. B. H.

Step on the Gas!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We out West are sorry to have to inform leaders and saviors of the country in Washington that NRA will not work, will not make the grade until you give it more gas.

We find that you are trying to do a broad-gauge business on a narrow-gauge money; that you are borrowing too much money and not creating money instead. That money you borrow would be otherwise loaned or invested if the Government would cease to borrow, making the wealth of the rich tax free and also paying them an interest on the money.

With the present state of inertia, stagnation and mounting cost of living, and trying to run the big machine without sufficient gas, we are going to fail, and we may as well begin to get ready for bigger soup houses and breadlines this winter.

JOSEPH A. SHIRES.
Denver, Colo., May 30.

Anti-Depression Plan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After reading the discourse on the world monetary situation by Senator Borah in The Post on June 4, I wonder how many people read it, or tried to digest it.

Four years ago President Hoover called a special session of Congress to revise the tariff. The tariff, it was then pointed out, had nothing whatever to do with the depression, laying the cause to the demonetization of silver and a vicious banking and currency system, which was accentuated when Great Britain in 1926 put India, a silver-using country for centuries, on a gold basis and dumped their silver as a commodity.

Since that time the world, excepting France and a few minor countries whose population does not exceed 150,000,000 people (the world population is estimated at 2,000,000,000 people), have gone off the gold standard fetish, but no international money exchange had been agreed upon by the nations. As a result trading between nations is in a chaotic condition and will continue so until a world international money exchange is agreed upon.

The Senate will soon pass the 25-75 silver-gold bill, which is the entering wedge to bimetallism, but the writer can not see any great improvement in commodity prices as a result of it. Before another year, he can see the United States on a 16-to-1 independent bimetallic basis which will force the few gold countries into an international agreement.

But there is still a more important question to be solved. The power to issue money or credit—now in the hands of private bankers—must be restored by Congress to the Government, which is the people, at nominal rates of interest, sufficient to pay the cost of administration. This will forever end banker-made depressions and will result in the greatest prosperity in world history.

WILLIAM J. DWYER.

"When I Was a Boy."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Old-Timer's story, "When I Was a Boy," now appearing serially in the magazine of The Sunday Post, is perfectly delightful. The past which it portrays is building into a very definite image and is most instructive, as well as entertaining, to those of us born in another time.

Tampa, Fla., June 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am enjoying immensely the Old-Timer's "When I Was a Boy," now appearing in the Sunday edition of The Post. A succession of remarkably vivid pictures is thrown upon the screen of the mind—where pictures are so much at home.

I also lived in those bygone years, and to read this tale is like the confirmation of a dream one almost doubted to have had. I look forward with the keenest delight to the continuance of this narrative.

ISABEL W. LOWMAN.

Post's Philatelic Column.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to take this opportunity to congratulate The Post on the excellent philatelic column it is running each Sunday. It is the consensus of opinion that your stamp section compares favorably with any being published in the United States.

For Economic Boycott.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: So John Bull has developed into a full-fledged repudiationist. He hired our money and now refuses to pay it back. He is a welsher. The United States should apply to him the same harsh treatment he is applying to the Irish Free State—namely—the economic boycott.

DAN DIXON.

"Why Blame Constituents?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The lament of the Representative's secretary, as printed in The Post Magazine on May 20, brings up the question "Why blame the constituents?" If the boss would regulate everything from the mating of frogs on the banks of Muddy Creek to the activities of the automobile industry, then the private secretary must do his stint.

May I suggest that if he objects to hearing so voluminously, profusely, and possibly profanely, from the folks back home, the aforesaid private secretary should prevail upon his boss to refrain from interference with every activity of the aforesaid folks back home?

C. W. KINNEY.
Worcester, Mass., June 5.

Pedagogic Piffle.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is the "silly season" in the educational world. The perennial crop of high school and college grads will, as usual, be subjected to a barrage of moth-eaten, time-honored, high-sounding, empty and futile platitudes in "baccalaureate" sermons and commencement addresses.

This commencement stuff threatens to destroy civilization through the tedium of boredom. I do not know who started this vocalic torture of innocent youth, but I know who ought to end it. By all means, while Congress is legislating on the drought menace, it ought to slip in an innocent-looking amendment to the bill making it a capital offense to get up on a hot night and peddle this piffle while the overwrought, nervous, anxious youngsters are squirming in their chairs, pretending to be paying rapt attention to the torturer while all the time their thought is to lay greedy hands upon the elusive sheepskin and wondering where they can find a job when they get out. KINDHEARTED.

As Others See It.

Canadian View.

Great Britain's note to the United States is quite frank in tone and we do not see how any other kind of reply to the formal debt reminder from Washington could have been expected. While specifically refraining from repudiation the Government at Westminister refuses to make further payment until a reasonable settlement of the whole problem can be arrived at with the neighboring republic.

The truth, long ago, accepted by a very large number of intelligent Americans, is: (1) That the United States has already profited handsomely on its war-time advances to its European allies, which were all spent in the United States on war supplies at exorbitant prices; (2) that these allies paid in blood to a degree never fully appreciated in the neighboring republic; (3) that when the loans were made leading Americans in and out of Congress declared repayment should never be asked; (4) that in refusing to take payment in goods or in anything but gold the United States has made repayment impossible; (5) that it costs the republic $10 for every $1 it succeeds in collecting, and (6) that though Great Britain has already paid more than half of the original debt she is still listed as owing more than the original sum, which is plainly ridiculous. We have quoted and could quote again columns of statements by informed Americans expressing these or similar views on this all-important issue. The trouble lies with the politicians and with the popular press writers, who tell the United States voters only what the latter wish to be told. Thus it is that this war-debt problem continues to overhang civilization and to hamper humanity's return to normal prosperity.

The Post Impressionist

Discovering Genius

Postoffice, Saturday.

A FEW years ago, it was the fashion to say, in the course of every obituary notice of every passing magazine editor, that he "discovered" O. Henry. This fashion, like large hats for the ladies, appears to be reviving.

Most of the sketches of Gilman Hall, who died the other day, either began or ended with the statement: "He discovered O. Henry." Those "most" were mostly wrong.

Mr. Hall was an able editor and quite capable of appreciating O. Henry's talents had he stumbled over them. But he didn't.

The fact is that the Post-Impressionist—himself then in the painful process of being discovered—happened to be present at Mr. Hall's first meeting with O. Henry.

Those were days in which fiction reputations were made with a celerity, and to a number, almost equaling the same process, with the same results, in these present times. Then, as now, many of the resultant fiction-reputations were essentially factitious. But then, before the movie, the tabloid and the radio, there were more readers for the writers than there are now.

Among the Book Mountains, the young best-sellers were climbing the highest peaks. Upon the magazine-shore "the great third wave" was just rolling in. The demand for fiction had reached to unprecedented and wholly unexpected bounds. So the publishers everywhere sent out their explorers — established novelists, literary advisers and editors—to discover new supplies.

Among the writers then already famous, yet forever generously seeking fresh rivals, no Columbus was more eager, none more kind, than William Dean Howells. The quietly humorous realist of decency applauded and assisted talent in the new naturalist or the new romanticist—if talent were really there. Howell's "finds" totaled at least a score of names still deservedly remembered.

Among the literary advisers of the book publishers, immaculate Ripley Hitchcock "led all the rest." He it was that, when with the Appletons, encouraged an unknown Stephen Crane. It was Ripley Hitchcock who found an amorphous manuscript in the "return-basket" of an assistant reader, read it, sent for its author, showed him how it might be given form, and thus stepfathered (for good or ill) that "David Harum" to which the movie has just restored something of its once wide popularity. . . .

George Horace Lorimer had been put in complete control of the once uncertain Saturday Evening Post, which he immediately made a sure thing. He realized—and he was the first and most important to realize it—that nobody had been writing for, and nobody writing about, the young and youngish majority of Americans, the army of business men in being or to be, who were what people really meant when they spoke of "America." Lorimer's genius supplied this market. He made authors, he found authors, to his soon enormous audience he directed authors theretofore cloistered in the narrow cells of a narrower tradition. From the earliest days of his editorial career to these days, there has been no first-rate American writer of fiction who has not "appeared" between the covers of The Saturday Evening Post.

In quite another magazine-field, Robert Hobart Davis was pursuing a not dissimilar course. The dry bones of Munsey's Magazine he clothed with flesh and pumped into its arteries the living blood of new authors whom he diligently sought. You can't call the roll of the Authors' League without getting a hundred cheers for "Bob" Davis.

So much for examples easily multiplied. "Discovery," to put it another way, was as much in the air as ever it was when Elizabeth's captains sailed the Seven Seas—and the aborigines were mighty glad to be discovered. They still recall their discoveries gratefully.

We know more than one mature novelist who says today: "Lorimer, I'll never forget that you found me; that's why I've brought you this new piece of mine, the best thing I ever wrote." And that same novelist, if Lorimer declined the bait, and if Davis were still editing, would take the declined piece straight to Davis, saying: "Bob, I'll never forget that you found me; that's why I've brought you this new piece of mine, the best thing I ever wrote."

Well, in the magazine epoch that such an author would be recalling, Richard Duffy was also looking for geniuses. He edited, in New York, Street & Smith's fancifully named Ainslee's Magazine (there was no Mr. Ainslee, or Mrs.), and Duffy was making it a formidable rival of the successful Smart Set. He accepted some of The Post Impressionist's first stories and invited us to lunch—at the last minute couldn't go and asked us to join his assistant, Mr. Hall, at Mouquin's Restaurant, on Sixth avenue, with "a queer fellow signing himself 'O. Henry,' who is a mystery to us, but who's been turning in some splendid stuff."

We went. We remember Hall's pressing questions, which embarrassed the other guest, but didn't baffle O. Henry. Finally he mentioned a wife.

"Are you married?" asked Hall.

O. Henry—Porter—never blinked an eye. "Oh, yes! Been married three years—have a daughter aged 6," he fibbed.

This ended the questionnaire! Our talk demonstrated that Hall had not discovered O. Henry. The latter had long been sending Ainslee's stories from Pittsburgh, which "sold themselves," and had now persuaded Duffy to advance him (from Street & Smith) enough money for a start in New York. Years later, O. Henry solved it for him. Hall would have been the last to claim the discovery.

The Apostles of Nietzsche.

IN the year 1934 the apostles of Nietzsche had made considerable progress toward the fulfillment of their hero's prophecy of a Superman. In the United States they had established themselves in Washington as a Brain Trust, a group of supermen out of which it was assumed the Superman of their hero would develop, and for which the struggle was intense.

BARGERON.

For many years previously the teachings of the philosopher had been deeply imprinted upon the impressionable minds of the young intellectuals. An acceptance of him had come to be, in fact, a mark of culture.

Now they were in the saddle and adhering closely to the doctrine that self-assertion makes for the perfection in man. To this end they were self-asserting all the time, making so much noise, indeed, that it was most difficult to perceive through the din which of the group of superman was most likely to emerge as the Superman.

* * * *

It is not unlikely that Nietzsche's prophecy that democracy would end would have been fulfilled had it not been that in the struggle for the mantle of Superman among the group of supermen they killed one another off and left the masses, for which their philosophy held contempt, still in the saddle governing themselves as they had done for more than 150 years.

In the effort to keep the Nietzsche supermen from stepping on one another's toes the work was divided up among them. Thus there was placed a superman over the superbusiness of agriculture and another superman over the superbusiness of finance and industry, and so on. At first it worked very well. There seemed to be a coordination of purpose among all the supermen.

They planned as they sipped their coffee, they pooled their ideas, and in public presented a solid front. But the very fact that they were each and every one a superman made it inevitable that in the primitiveness of their thought they finally turned upon one another and gnawed each other to death.

* * * *

One thing their teacher had not pointed out to them was the treacherousness of man's vanity, how it slips up and attacks the strength of the supermen even more so than it does that of the mere man. Self-assertion and not humility was the lesson they had learned. This, most students agree, is what came finally in the era, so to speak, of 1934, to destroy the supermen who had given prospect of going so far.

Some students now profess to see the beginning of the end when Mr. Roosevelt sought to raise the salary of one of the supermen. This tended, and presumably it was the purpose, to set him up as the chief of the supermen, which naturally gave him an advantage in the race to be the superman.

Associate supermen rebelled. Supermen Jerome Frank, Landis and Ben Cohen did. What sort of a superman business was this? they asked.

They wanted, it seemed, a democracy of supermen if not a democracy of the masses. The promotion of Superman Tugwell had its immediate effect over all Washington. Theretofore, at dinner which Washington hostesses gave for the Brain Trust, there had been no seating according to rank. Each superman scrambled for his seat and told his bon mot as fast as it came to his mind.

Now, however, at all brain trust dinners, the chief was placed at the head of the table, and the lesser supermen were placed around in any old way.

Before they could tell their bon mot they had to wait until the chief superman told his. It was manifestly a condition that could not continue. It was inevitable that the lesser supermen should combine against the chief and when he attempted to tell a bon mot, to shout him down.

Their telling of bon mots came to be a brawl. It is not what Nietzsche had foreseen at all.

German Threat Colors French National Path

Sweeping Reforms in Government Demanded, But News From Across the Rhine May Sway Course of Changes.

X—THE FRENCH REVIVAL.

By Hamilton Fish Armstrong, Editor Foreign Affairs.

What is the present temper of France, and what forces are likely to influence her as she approaches the decisions outlined in yesterday's article?

Six months ago, despite the Hitler revolution and Germany's proclaimed determination to rearm and expand, the French people were overwhelmingly pacific. The Cartel des Gauches held sway in Paris as in the provinces. In the Chamber of Deputies it had a large majority, and Briand's ideals, if attenuated, still prevailed at the Quai d'Orsay. War on behalf of Poland, to preserve the independence of Austria, or for any purpose except to repel actual invasion, was considered out of the question, not only by most Frenchmen, but even by the French general staff. Indeed, the staff feared that even an order for a partial mobilization as a gesture to restrain Germany from some possible adventure in the East would be generally resisted.

Today the Left still has a majority in the chamber, but it is a majority which does not rule. Its prestige as a political instrument was broken by the long record of its inability to keep a ministry in power long enough to accomplish anything, and the reputation of most of its leaders have been spattered by the Stavisky scandals. Herriot, a man of personal integrity, the most important representative of the Left in the Doumergue coalition cabinet, is not in robust health, and finds himself with uncongenial colleagues and a divided following.

His former party rival, Daladier, is in eclipse, having been the responsible head of the government that fatal February evening when 17 demonstrators were killed in the Place de la Concorde and over 2,000 demonstrators and police were wounded.

Chautemps, never a man of first rank, is in disgrace for having headed the ineffectual cabinet which preceded Daladier's, and for having acorded routine party support to deputies now discovered to have been on Stavisky's pay roll. The younger leaders of the left, men like Frot and Cot, have been particularly attacked for alleged plots to set up on anti-Fascist dictatorship; they are even accused of having allowed street incidents to run to fatal lengths in order to convince the country that there really was danger of a Fascist coup d'etat.

Murder of Judge Prince Shook Provincial Calm.

The provinces at first were bewildered by what happened in Paris on February 6 and inclined to believe that a Fascist mob had terrorized the nation's duly elected representatives. The murder of Judge Prince while engaged in attempting to unravel the Stavisky scandals came as a shock to this complacency. Was there, after all, a political Mafia? People throughout the country saw that there might be more than they had liked to think in the cry against the preponderant influence enjoyed by the left parties under the "two ballot" electoral system operating in France.

But this reversal of feeling did not go very far. Paris remained concerned and angry, but to a large degree the provinces lost interest, and unless Premier Doumergue demonstrates spectacularly that it is impossible for an honest government to work with Parliament and clean house, the reaction against the Radical Socialists and Socialists, against their parliamentary machine and against Parliament as an institution, will probably fail to pry any large number of voters outside Paris away from their usual party allegiance.

In Paris there is a determined reaction by the middle classes against their unfavorable situation in comparison with that of the government bureaucracy and the government employes in the schools, the postoffice, the railways, &c. But the functionnaires, whose wages have much improved on a gold-franc basis in comparison with the income of the average citizen, are not going to give in easily. All through the country, and in most of the small towns, they and their families and their lawyers and the small business men who enjoy government monopolies or are otherwise dependent on government favor are mainly radical Socialists. Some of the lower government employes are Communists, some of the school teachers and others are Socialists, but the vast majority will continue to be radical Socialists because their living depends upon it.

There is a striking lack, too, of leaders on the right. The truth is that when most of the men who have controlled French politics since the war were wiped out overnight the right had an opportunity which they were unprepared to exploit. Various veteran and other patriotic associations have tried to make good the lack of a nationalistic leadership and program, but can not supply either instantly. They feel that failing drastic electoral and parliamentary reforms new elections would merely return the same old faces to parliament, and that the same old game of favoritism and barter would begin again. They therefore make parliamentary reform a principal point in their program, and some of them threaten to carry it out by force if necessary.

Patriotic Organizations Are Varied to a Degree.

The so-called "patriotic organizations" are varied to a degree. Far to the Right are the Camelots du Roi, technically partisans of a Bourbon-Orleans restoration, but in fact more against the republic than in favor of any particular monarch. Also on the extreme Right, nearly a French equivalent of the Nazi storm-troops, are the shock formations of Solidarite Francaise, first oganized by M. Coty but his no longer.

More moderate, but nevertheless specifically opposed to the programs of the Left parties, are the Jeunesses Patriotes, led by M. Tattinger. The Croix de Feu, headed by Col. de la Roque, is composed of front-line service men and the younger generation attracted by their demand for sweeping government reform, order, discipline and a patriotic foreign policy. The Jeunesse Patriotes, the Croix de Feu and the Union Nationale des Combattants are roughly in the Center, politically, between the groups first described and the main organization of veterans, the Federation des Anciens Combattants, some 4,000,000 in number. This formerly was nonpartisan, but is quite definitely a prop of the moderate Left parties since its secretary, M. Rivollet, became minister of pensions in the Doumergue cabinet.

It is an open question how many, and which of these organizations (excluding the royalists, who hunt alone) can come together on a definite program, sinking the 25 per cent of differences in their aims and concentrating on their 75 per cent of common aspirations.

There is further and more important question. If some of the patriotic organizations are able to overcome the French habit to atomize rather than agglomerate, and if they retain their first clan, can they avoid overshooting their mark? Supposing they acquire enough of a following to force drastic reforms in the parliamentary system, abolish the selfish interaction of officials and journalists, and break the influence of "states within the state" like the Comite des Forges or Havas; and supposing they resist Communist attacks from the extreme left and royalist infiltration from the extreme right; can they, with the enormous momentum which such successes would imply, avoid attempting to set up a Fascist or wholly extra-constitutional form of government?

No one can say with assurance. The individualistic spirit is deep-rooted in France. Those who should know best think it can survive the present crisis. But ample evidence has been given that the French Chamber represents parliamentarism in a very exaggerated form, that many deputies are little despots, indifferent to the demands of party leaders and given to log-rolling and graft, and that under this system ministries are impotent and unstable. If the Chamber of Deputies proves willing to abandon some of its vested interests, permanently allowing the executive more power and responsibility, we shall probably be quite safe in predicting that the Third Republic will retain unimpaired its essentially democratic nature. But will the Chamber spontaneously reform itself?

Many Reforms Suggested But Chamber Threatens Them.

Will the deputies agree, for example, that the resignation of a cabinet shall always be followed by a general election, with the seats of all the deputies thrown in doubt? Or that the President of the Republic and Premier together shall have the right to dissolve the Chamber? Or—most important of all—that the Chamber shall lose the right to initiate expenditures, its authority in fiscal matters being restricted to refusing or reducing the appropriations suggested by the government? Some members of the Doumergue cabinet have reforms of this sort in mind. Others think the irresponsible financial habits of the Chamber could be simply corrected by requiring that it always vote the necessary revenues whenever it voted any expenditure. Others think it will be enough to reduce the number of deputies, who now total over 600, and perhaps change the "double ballot" system which has facilitated election dickers between Radical Socialist and Socialist candidates.

Has the Chamber been frightened enough by recent events to swallow the more fundamental of these reforms? M. Doumergue has succeeded in making it empower him to impose new taxes and unpalatable cuts in the salaries of public employes. Will it follow him now in making constitutional and electoral changes? If it waits for the spur of another crisis there is risk that the reforming power, perhaps having fought again in the streets of Paris, and feeding on fresh victories, will be tempted to destroy representative government outright instead of merely modifying it.

In this confused and worrisome situation, engaged in a difficult readjustment of her political and social forces, and with business conditions far from satisfactory, France must set about choosing a foreign policy on one of the broad lines indicated in yesterday's article. Choose she must, consciously or passively. In a crisis, people often feel that to refrain from action is less dangerous than to act, not realizing that it has just as positive and clear-cut results either for good or ill. The tendency might be, then, to let the current of European events carry France along for the time being, without attempting to dam or divert the flood at any particular point.

News from Germany Raises Doubt Among Many.

Against this tendency several factors are in operation. The French general staff is represented in the present cabinet and sees to it that the minister of war informs his colleagues constantly of the progress of German rearmament. The development of events in central and eastern Europe may suddenly require that France definitely act or fail to act on behalf of her proteges. And the events of February 6 have undoubtedly produced a nationalistic revival in certain sections of the French people, especially in the capital. The government is finding difficulty in satisfying patriotic demands for reform growing out of the Stavisky scandals. The possibility of having to devalue the franc must be constantly in the back of their minds. Will they be tempted to shift the bull's-eye? Will they insensibly be driven to take a stronger line in foreign policy in order to cover up the difficulties they experience in dealing with the situation at home?

A particular bad prophet, Mr. Prince Collier, published an appraisal of the French character in 1913—only a year before the battle of the Marne. It was widely read. It was as follows: "The world wonders at the decadence of schoolberidden France, where the boys are effeminatized, the youths secularized and the men sterilized morally and patriotically; France, with its police without power, its army without patriotism, and its people without influence; disorderly at home and cringing abroad; a nation owing its autonomy, even, to the fact that it is serviceable as a buffer-state."

Nobody—not even the author just quoted, were he still alive—would make that particular statement about France today. But there is a risk that the contemporary disorganization of French political life, the moral crisis which permeates the whole nation and reminds one by its intensity of the Dreyfuss affair, will lead foreign observers to underestimate the strength and sweep of the revivement which is under way. The French people are pacific. But they also are logical, and the news that comes daily out of Germany has raised a fundamental and disquieting doubt in the minds of many Frenchmen who by nature would ask nothing better than to be allowed to devote themselves to peaceful pursuits. Nor must we discount the new and energetic forces at work. The extent to which they are able to influence the development of French political temper in the months ahead will be a chief factor determining the coming political constellation of Europe, with its balance of powers and its message of peace or war.

Fears and Fortunes.

THIS depression has cost the country over $250,000,000,000, writes Dr. Daniel Starch—and that is more than eight times the money cost to us of the Great War. It had economic causes which he does not gloss over, but once the business structure begins to quaver and topple, it is fear which does the real damage. "Booms and depressions are examples of mob psychology." The stock market, that sensitive instrument which turns with every breeze to mob feeling, show this clearly. Between 1929 and 1932 the fluctuation in stock prices was more than six times that of business itself.

THEO. HALL.

In "Faith, Fear and Fortunes" (Richard R. Smith, $2), Dr. Starch gives quite the best non-technical summary of recent business history and its meaning which I've seen. To it he has brought the best of his twin abilities as a psychologist (he is one of the thousand leading men of science of the country) and as a business consultant (formerly a professor at the Harvard School of Business Administration, he now advises great corporations). Also, he writes well.

* * * *

He begins with a recitation of the great October crash, paralleling it with some very amusing, though pathetic, financial prophecies which were made in the months previous. Because of "acts of God" and mass emotion and action, the prophets fell flat. Then he discusses the relation of stock prices to value—the latter he shows to be 75 per cent mental. Descriptions of the seventeenth century tulip craze in Holland, the Mississippi Bubble, the South Sea Co. and the Florida land boom all illustrate the psychological factors behind economics.

It is the great "I want," he says, which causes the trouble. People all want the same things at the same time, and real value goes up the chimney. The dislocation to the economic structure is obvious. But Dr. Starch does not take "Old Adam" as incorrigible or hopeless. The 1 per cent of reason in human nature may have far-reaching results, and may leaven the whole loaf.

He finds useless such attempts to alleviate conditions as control of commodity prices, control of production, control of credit, monetary control and public works programs. But since depressions are caused by booms gone sour, he would control booms. And chiefly in the realm of psychological education.

* * * *

Seven suggestions are put forward. First, mass education in economic common sense. "It is not so Utopian as it sounds" to expect that "mob action may be curbed to some extent by educating men to act more from reason and less from emotion."

Second, a supreme economic council of 75 men and women to give authority to "sound psychoeconomic philosophy." He names specifically the ones of his choice, among them the former president, Ford, Chrysler, Atterbury, Walter Gifford, John D. Rockefeller, jr., Walter Lippman, Alfred Smith, Leonard P. Ayres, the Rev. Fosdick, Cardinal Hayes, Prof. Charles A. Beard, William Green and Nicholas M. Butler.

Third, collateral for speculative loans should be limited.

Fourth, banks should have a higher standard. Since 1921, two out of every five of our banks have failed. He points to the shaming example of Canada, which hasn't had a bank failure since 1923.

Fifth, privately planned cooperation in industrial management, after the example of the New England Council.

Sixth, industry must find new products, new things to do.

Seventh, every business enterprise should have some one merely to think and plan with an eye to the long view.

* * * *

Dr. Starch will please those readers who believe human nature can't be changed—for he insists that depressions come when basic psychological factors are ignored. Many attempts to legislate prosperity are as ridiculous in this as was the bill proposed in a State Legislature that the circumference of a circle should be an even three times the diameter.

And he will also please those who keep their faith in an improvement in human nature. For the constant efforts of the 1 per cent of reason in us has given us all our solid achievements. There is no reason why it should vanish from the human makeup in 1934, or why progress should stop where it is, he points out.

Quick, witty, facietious, he nevertheless is conceded sound legislative views. Last week told a reformer opposing his horse racing bill that he couldn't see why reform eschewed gambling when biggest toss-up of all, backed by theologians, is the "Hereafter Handicap." Though he inverts his wine glass, was among first to sponsor beer, boxing and legal horse racing. Quick to respond to public sentiment, he has aided much local legislation through membership on House District Committee. Popular with press and gallery, he is famed for pithy sayings. Courts laughs. # Another Letter From a Dad To His Red-Headed Daughter

By Robert Quillen

My dear Louise:

I suppose you are too young to remember the other Norton twin, but you have heard much about him and doubtless you have wondered why he outdistanced his brother.

It wasn't because of greater ability. They were both smart when they were little fellows, and a difference of one point in their general avereages determined which should be valedictorian when they graduated from high school.

Neither went to college, for the family was poor and their earnings were needed, so neither had any apparent advantage in equipment.

Why then, did one climb so much higher than the other?

I think it was wholly a matter of the terms they used in their thinking.

One dreamed of being the biggest merchant in his home town; the other thought in terms of continents and millions.

Each won the thing he set out to win, which is success enough, but one is an obscure merchant in a hick town and the other controls a vast industry that straddles the continent.

Here, then is your recipe for bigness.

To the man who deals in millions, a million is no bigger than a dime. It is merely the unit he uses in playing his game.

If one man handles 10-pound bags and another 90-pound bags, which develops the greater strength?

If one man plans to be a policeman and another plans to be President, which develops the greater vision and the better understanding of National problems?

Men or girls, it works the same way.

You can't be any bigger than the terms you use in thinking.

A good mind can't make you big if you keep it focused on dates, clothes and gossip. It takes vision to make you big and vision is a matter of thinking in big terms.

Thinking in terms of inches is necessary for a carpenter, but you never could build an empire that way. Love, Dad.

Young Men of the Graduating Class:

To have spent the last four years in college has been a great break for you, and no fooling. While others were out on a limb signaling for the rescue squad and wondering whether the answer would come in person or by radio, you have been privileged to devote yourselves to outsmarting the faculty, mastering football signals and sampling the local beers. You are now about to remove the blinkers and face facts, employment managers and the classified ads. I wish you luck. And you will need it.

* * * *

Those of you who can play golf, pass a screen test, croon, play the clarinet or write radio skits, need not worry much about an immediate career; to you opportunity beckons. But those who are merely well educated, normal and possessed of a serious purpose in life may have to face tough going. Until the recovery gets into high gear you will probably have to join the great army of people who send in applause cards, win $2 prizes for automobile slogans and criticize the New Deal.

* * * *

Let us stop to consider how a college education has helped to prepare you for the battle of life. On second thought, let us not.

* * * *

I can not say for certain, but it is my conviction that these bright college years have given you better table manners, a pretty good tennis backhand and the ability to read editorials in your native tongue.

* * * *

The years you have spent in cloistered seclusion have been years of chaos and bewilderment in the outside world. Everywhere we see confusion. Even baccalaureates are harder to follow.

* * * *

Old institutions, customs and Babe Ruth are crumbling. Industry, society, government and the Gulf Stream are changing. The world is in a ferment. Society is crowding out toward new frontiers. Civilization is having dizzy spells. Our economic system is sick. And I don't feel any too good myself. Upon you, young men, there rests a peculiar responsibility. I will not go into it in detail. See my baccalaureates of the last 15 years for further particulars.

* * * *

The situation calls for character, courage and a good letter to the right company. You will need vision, ideals, determination and all the lucky breaks. My message to you is: Be bold! Be brave! Be patient! And until something turns up don't hesitate to help the old man with the ashes, the gardening and the general work around the yard.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

Two Grand Old Men.

So many unimportant statistics are painfully collected and inflicted on a long-suffering public, that I wonder some of these mathematical hounds have not thought of what would be a valuable set of figures. I suggest that someone discover and report the number of men and women now living in the United States who are over 90 years of age and in full possession of their wits and in sufficient possession of their bodies to move around.

In spite of all modern science, sanitation, &c., individuals do not live any longer than they did 3,000 years ago; but science has been of enormous benefit in lessening infant mortality, and in (apparently) enabling old persons to remain active.

It is still first-page news if any one lives to be 100, no matter in what condition he may be, and no matter whether his life has been of any use or not.

It would be very interesting to have a list of active nonagenarians; I will mention three.

On the one and same day I received a letter from a man in Boston, aged 95, who wrote me a two-page letter in an absolutely firm hand; in equally steady legibility I got one from a lady in Pittsburgh, aged 97, who wished to begin a new course of reading, and asked for information on a certain author whom she meant to study with some detail. I think such matters are worth recording; they are encouraging.

The other day the metropolitan papers, in announcing the death of a certain man, said he was the oldest Harvard graduate; but he was not. The oldest Harvard graduate is in pretty good health, thank you, is as clear-headed and active as ever, and goes to his office in the Lawyers' Building, in Boston. This is Henry Munroe Rogers. He was born February 27, 1839. He knew Abraham Lincoln, served in the U. S. N., 1862-65. He was admitted to the bar in 1868. His autobiography is intensly interesting. He writes me:

"My dear friend:

I have survived my ninety-fifth birthday celebration and am at my office, as you see.

"Your telegram of congratulation and Godspeed came to me yesterday, and I can only say that if I deserve all you have put into that telegram I'd better not risk remaining on this planet much longer. In 1863 I read my first obituary notice in The Boston Transcript—and have never dared to die since, though several other obituaries have been outlived by me since that year of our Lord, 1863.

"Anyhow, I thank you for your telegram and will try to live up to it. Ever affectionately yours, HENRY MUNROE ROGERS."

The oldest living graduate of Yale is the Rev. Dr. Augustus Field Beard, of Norwalk, Conn., who on May 11 reached the age of 101. His letter to Mr. Rogers:

"My dear Mr. Rogers:

"I wish to congratulate again Harvard's oldest alumnus on the occasion of his ninety-fifth birthday. With your wonderful life behind you to enrich your memories may you go on to add to them. I admire the will and the way in which you are keeping on. You are wise. Stick to it until you are 100. Yours sincerely, AUGUSTUS F. BEARD."

Avoiding a Force.

The hand below, which was played in a recent tournament, is a good example of careful planning of the play in order that the contract may be fulfilled. Slipshod methods will not avail as there are plenty of pitfalls for those who are not reasonably careful in the timing of their plays.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1♡ | Pass | 1♠ | Pass |
| 2♠ | Pass | 4♡ | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

Of course, South's hand is a bare minimum but the tendency is very strong, particularly at tournaments, to open any minimum hand, regardless of the elements of favorable or unfavorable distribution.

West's opening lead was the diamond King and, granted the 3-2 break in trumps, the hand did not appear to present any particular difficulties from the standpoint of the Declarer. He felt that he might have to concede a trick in trumps, a trick in spades and a trick in clubs. The first trick, of course, was won with the Ace in Dummy and in order to take the finesse in the spade suit a small trump was led at once. When East played the Jack, signs of danger were apparent. It seemed probable now that West might have four trumps to the Queen. However, that was a situation which could be dealt with later. A small spade was led, and the finesse of the Jack lost to East's King.

East at this point had no good return. To lead a club would be to fortuitously present the Declarer with the establishment of that suit. A diamond return would be futile as it would be playing the Declarer's game, and a spade is the only lead that appears harmless on the surface.

This was the lead chosen by East, but South now easily made his contract. The one round of trumps had aided him materially from a standpoint of time as it removed an exit card from the East hand when the spade finesse failed. Now South's trump fortress was strong enough to resist the menace of West's length in the trump suit.

This was the method of play adopted by which the contract was made. The hand, however, as I said, was played in duplicate, and the opening lead in all cases was the same. Where players sought to increase the small number of entries in the South hand by leading a club on the second round, the contract was defeated as West, after winning the first club lead with the Ace when the Queen was played from the South hand, at once returned the suit, and the Declarer could not avoid a force in the club suit which wrecked the possibility of making four-odd.

Capital Debs Dress Up for A Pay Check

CAPITAL debutantes have gone the average girl one better in the old feminine game of "dress up." Washington misses are doing it for the fun—and for a pay check.

The city's most popular models are not unknown beauties. They are daughters of Congressmen, girls from military circles and "poor little rich girls."

They model everything from formal dinner gowns to the latest and briefest bathing suits in programs put on at hotels, in the auditoriums of women's clubs, at store shows. They parade style-show platforms with swagger and a grace that is quite professional, an Associated Press dispatch tells us.

There is a list of models almost as long as the social register, and including many of the same names.

Pretty, brunette Janet Sheppard, daughter of the Texas Senator, is one. She admits quite frankly there is no charity excuse for the girls entering the work.

"Most of us, unfortunately," she says, "are our own pet charity right now, and anyway the pay is not overwhelming."

Helene Fortesque is one of the most beautiful blondes on the list. She is usually kept in reserve for frothy pink, organdy dance frocks, to play the bride in style show wedding ceremonies.

Betty Glassford, daughter of Gen. Guy Glassford, retired, was one of the models most in demand until she rushed to the West Coast this year, to marry Lieut. Lee Wood Parke, U. S. N. But now the Navy is back in the East, "Betty" is expected back to give her aloof, "Katherine Hepburn-ism" touch to the fashion parade.

The list of models includes Janie Moswain, daughter of the Representative from South Carolina; Laura Barkley, daughter of the Senator from Kentucky; Mrs. Marianne Harrison Cummings, daughter of the Senator from Mississippi; Hope Jackson, daughter of Robert Jackson, former Democratic National committeeman, and Christine Ekengren, daughter of the late Minister of Sweden.

It's a Good City for Debs, Praises a Social Mentor

TO THE GIRL going in for a social career Washington offers many advantages, and not least among them is the large number of eligible bachelors in the diplomatic and official circles, says Mrs. William Laird Dunlop, jr., social mentor.

Washington Offers Cosmopolitan Contacts, Not to Mention Grand Opportunities for Meeting Many Bright Young Men.

Radio audiences from coast to coast were given intimate glimpses behind the scenes of brilliant social and official life in Washington yesterday when The Post radio reporter interviewed a Capital social mentor. The broadcast was one of the twice-weekly interviews with "First Ladies of the Capital," sponsored by The Washington Post.

By Margaret Santry
(Post Radio Reporter).

A SOCIAL career at best is only a superficial game to be played for pleasure, Mrs. William Laird Dunlop, jr., Washington social mentor, told a coast-to-coast radio audience yesterday.

"It's not the most important thing in life, and not as worthy an enterprise as many other things one can do," Mrs. Dunlop said, when interviewed by The Post's radio reporter over a National Broadcasting Co. network.

"I have seen parents heartbroken because their daughters have not been socially successful, and girls desperate because they have not been popular."

Speaking in The Post's "First Ladies of the Capital" series, Mrs. Dunlop—who was responsible for organizing the Washington Bachelors' Cotillion here seven years ago, and who makes a vocation of counseling people in social procedure—discussed the advantages of a girl making her social debut in Washington.

Cosmopolitan Experience.

"There are numerous advantages that do not obtain in other cities," she declared. "Washington does offer the kind of cosmopolitan social experience and social contacts of an international nature to a young girl she might in no other way have.

"This is a valuable foundation for a social career, and I think a very important reason so many American girls come out in Washington.

"I am sure the fact that the Diplomatic Corps, the Army, the Navy, and all the official branches of the Government provide a large array of attractive and eligible bachelors is not the least reason why so many girls are presented to society here.

"While I can't say it is easy for a strange girl without connections successfully to launch a social career here, it is true there are fewer restrictions than in Baltimore, New York, Philadelphia, Charleston and some other cities where an assembly controls the presentation of girls to society.

"Here in Washington a girl can come out by simply being put on the debutante list. Of course, it is understood before she can be put on the list she must have the qualifications necessary. It's accepted, of course, she must have the perquisites of a lady. That means some good social background in her home community and good schooling. Of course, to be financially in a position to assume the expense that coming out into society involves is a most important factor."

Miss Santry: "Do you mean that any girl who comes to Washington and has money can get into society?"

Fewer Articles Here.

Mrs. Dunlop: "No. However there are fewer obstacles here than in most cities."

Miss Santry: "I'm curious about the mechanics of bringing a girl out. For instance, a mother brings her daughter to you to discuss the prospect of her Washington debut. What happens next?"

Mrs. Dunlop: "If the girl has the necessary attributes and qualifications I've mentioned before, and if she has sufficient money, the actual business of promoting her social contacts is begun. After the establishment of the proper address and the selection of the proper wardrobe to take her through the season, the coming-out party is planned."

Miss Santry: "What is the average cost of a coming-out ball, Mrs. Dunlop?"

Mrs. Dunlop: "A ball for 150 to 500 guests can be given for any sum between $500 and $1,000. That includes music, flowers, and, of course, the ballroom. A tea dance costs almost as much, for the same price is paid for music, flowers, rental, and practically the same food is served. The cost of a dinner is from $3 to $6 a guest."

Miss Santry: "Where do the guests come from in the case of a girl who is new to Washington?"

Mrs. Dunlop: "All socially acceptable young men and women in resident and official society are on a special list. Invitations for coming out parties are sent to them and the parties are always well attended."

Leaving Cards.

Miss Santry: "Besides the coming out ball, what is the other social ritual through which you conduct debutantes, Mrs. Dunlop?"

Mrs. Dunlop: "The first thing a debutante and her family must do upon arriving in Washington is leave their cards at the White House. Then they make calls and leave cards at the embassies and legations. Next they call on all the other debs and their mothers. After this the round of entertainment begins."

Miss Santry—"What do you do about a little deb who doesn't click?"

Mrs. Dunlop—"That's where I have to depend upon kind young women who are willing to act as escorts when I need them. Fortunately, most of the girls I have brought out have been successful and have made interesting marriages as a result of their Washington debuts. Of course, the bachelors all rally 'round the most popular girl, but it isn't always the most beautiful and most popular who get the best husbands. Some girls I've known were distinctly not beautiful, but they had other qualities of charm and intellect that enabled them to make some of the best matches in Washington."

Mother of Quintuplets Rates Some Sympathy

A Parent of But Three Children Commiserates for Future School Performances, Piano Recitals and Circus Expeditions.

By Willie Snow Ethridge.

THOUGH much has been written abqut the five baby girls born to Mme. Ovilla Dionne—and oh yes, to Mr. Dionne—up in Ontario, nobody whom I have read has touched upon the most baffling problem of all. And that is simply: How poor, dear, little Mrs. Dionne is going to manage them all?

While they remain in the incubator it won't be so bad; but it seems fairly certain they can't be incubated all their lives. How, as they grow older, is she going to separate them when they tie up over the same pair of socks? Will she throw water on them or beat them back with a chair? How is she going to tell who has on whose bloomers and why?. And when she has told who has on whose bloomers, how is she going to get them off and on to the rightful owners? Will she use chloroform or gas?

How will she keep all their shoes half-soled? How will she get their hair cut? How . . . oh, heavens, I can think of a million how's.

You see, I have offspring myself. No quituplets by any means; but offspring. Three of them. And they so fill my every waking hour—and a lot of my half-waked ones—I can't conceive of what any woman would do with five or more.

In Re Eskimo.

How will Mrs. Dionne possibly contrive all the Japanese kimonos and Martha Washington consumes and Queen of the May outfits and bareback riders' suits and other paraphernalia those five young ladies are sure to demand during their grammar school days? I, with just my three, have grown old and gray-haired fashioning butterfly wings, gluing spangles on tarlaton stringing bells on clown suits and creating as many other costumes as a circus wardrobe mistress.

The time Bubber (one of my three is a boy) was an Eskimo was the most trying, I believe. He had to be an Eskimo so he could review with the proper feeling a book about Eskimos during Children's Book Week at the library. I took a pair of white outing night drawers and pasted dabs of cotton on them for four hours. The result did not look like any Eskimo suit I had ever seen; but I comforted myself with the thought I had never seen many.

On the day of the reviewing (that sounds like the recent Navy affair; but I assure you this was of much greater importance) the female offsprings and I sat in the audience while Bubber sat white and wooden upon the platform. Suddenly the oldest girl, whom we have tactily and lovingly nicknamed Shug, began to giggle. Tears of laughter swam in her eyes and she nudged the Youngest Offspring and me. "Look at Bubber," she mumbled. "Look at Bubber! He's losing his fur."

And it was so. A ring of white lay about his feet.

The climax came when he arose to speak. He left in the chair his entire cotton seat. Like a downy pillow the fur, which I had worked so long and diligently to glue on, cushioned the chair bottom.

Then how will Mrs. Dionne live through the piano recitals every spring? For, of course, there will be piano recitals.

The Shug is the musician in our family. And when she is in recitals, the whole family must go and hear her. It is not sufficient that we pay for the lessons. The last time she performed, even the Roommate attended. He went without a struggle, though I have scarcely been able to get him out to anything, much less any kind of musical, since I married him.

Tch, Tch, How Rude.

There were many boys and girls on the program before the Shug, executing (I never realized before what an expressive word that was) Fairy Polkas, Dances of the Elves and Flora Waltzes. Their mamas and papas leaned forward tensely, gripped their hands in their laps and gulped down bar after bar; but the Shug's Bubber and Sissee were not impressed. When the sixth child was in the midst of her Murmuring Brook, the Youngest Offspring announced in a full grown voice; "I want to hear some music."

Finally the Shug's turn came. My hands grew clammy and I could scarcely catch my breath as she switched to the piano in her prissy little way and rested her fat, chubby fingers on the keys. The notes trickled out. I stole a glance at the Roommate. He cut his eyes at me. We beamed. Our big moment had come; but it was brief, brief. All too brief! As the Shug finished, Bubber and the Y. O. broke into loud and prolonged clapping. Bubber even whistled between his teeth and stamped his feet as he does at Tom Mix pictures. I tried to quiet them, but before I succeeded several volleys had punctuated the next tot's Spring Song. Again we were pierced with poisonous glances.

And how will Mrs. Dionne meet the situation of what each offspring will wear to school each morning?

Now I am the trustful kind, but dresses, socks, pants and shirts don't seem to work themselves out. I don't understand it, but they don't. As soon as the sun is up, shouts begin to soar in our house like smoke from the kitchen chimneys of farm houses.

"What am I going to wear to school?" rises from various rooms. "I haven't got a thing to wear. You never send my clothes to the laundry and now I haven't got a clean rag. You just get yours and daddy's clothes cleaned. All the girls in my class dress so cute, 'cept me. I'm just going to stay home. I sho ain't going to school and embarrass you and me."

And how will Mrs. Dionne get them to and from circuses without having two or three of them crushed by elephants or sampled by lions?

The Starving Son.

Always after a circus I am in bed anywhere from a night to a month. I am both mentally and physically exhausted. At the last one we attended, Bubber came very close to starving to death, if you are to believe him, and the youngest offspring got lost.

We were on the way out and had got as far as the animal arena when Bubber first discovered his precarious condition.

"Gimme a nickel. I wanna ice cream cone," said he.

"No, darling," I answered sweetly. "The ice cream cones are dusty."

"But I'm starving to death. I'm so hungry I can't stand it."

"Well, precious, you will have to stand it. You have had plenty to eat this afternoon."

"But I'm starving, I tell you! I'm starving." He wailed loudly.

A crowd gathered and peered at him—and us.

"Now hush that!" spoke the Roommate sharply. "Didn't you hear your mother say you weren't going to have anything more this afternoon?"

"But I'm starving." His voice rose higher and higher. "I'm about to faint."

"He says he's hungry," put in the Shug indignantly. "Why don't you give him something to eat? He's hungry."

"I'm starving," he mourned with renewed vigor. "I'm so weak I can't stand up."

The crowd glowered at us.

"But I'm starving."

"Come," commanded the Roommate with all the dignity he could muster under the circumstances. "Let's get out of here."

We prepared to move forward only to discover the Y. O. was missing. Our last vestige of dignity crumbled.

"Has anybody here seen a child?" I gasped. "Anybody here seen a child?"

"Yes, everybody here has seen about 5,000 children," retorted the Roommate, whose patience was considerably frazzled. "What you want to know is, has anybody here seen your child?"

We wormed in and out among people; we crawled beneath circus wagons; we ducked beneath the legs of giraffes; we dived under tent flaps. At last we found her, stroking the trunk of an elephant.

And how is Mrs. Dionne * * * lawd, I could go on worrying about Mrs. Dionne for pages and pages. There is no doubt about it, three is a crowd. But five * * * whew!

1934 Youth Doesn't Go For Modern Writing

Millay, Hemingway, Cather and Others of Our Illustrious Contemporaries Don't Have Appeal for Grads Victorians Do.

Cross-examining and winnowing world problems, sober youth has its own ideas as to how they should be solved. But what does this 1934 younger generation read? Does it favor the classic writers or the moderns? English or American authors? Novels, poetry, or plays? This is the last in a series of articles based on interviews with representative recent graduates of Washington universities.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

MODERN writers had better look to their laurels. For contemporary poets are losing out with modern youth, and the jazz tales of a jazz-age are as out-dated as Laura Jean Libby's saccharized romances that flared and faded in the 90's.

Who, then, are the favorites of today's college generation that takes its reading as seriously as its discussions on economics, politics, and Government?

This question was put to attractive Clara Critchfield, Pan-Hellenic president and a member of the student council of George Washington University.

Take poets, for instance—did the average college student prefer the moderns?

No Time for Moderns.

"Perhaps it's because we haven't had much time to spend on contemporary poets," she explained, "but I believe most of us prefer the older ones rather than those writing today. I don't believe Edna St. Vincent Millay, T. S. Eliot, and Edwin Arlington Robinson, for example, are as popular with the average student as Emily Dickinson, Browning, or even Tennyson."

What of the novelists? Were modern prose writers more widely read among students than modern poets?

Miss Critchfield doubted it. While Ernest Hemingway, Zona Gale and Willa Cather had a certain appeal, she questioned their works were read and reread so much as those of Thomas Hardy and George Meredith.

"Of course, just about all of us have read 'Anthony Adverse,' and, while many consider the first part unusually interesting, almost all agree the last part is dull."

Had she heard any comments from students on the widely discussed "Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas?"

"That's Gertrude Stein's book, isn't it?" she asked.

"No; I havent heard it discussed," she went on. "But some of Stein's works are most unpopular with us. A number of my friends have seen her play—is it called 'Three Saints in 'Five Acts' or 'Five Saints in Three Acts'?—and not a one has liked it. I don't think modern college students are ever impressed by anything so obviously designed to be different."

What would Eleanor Rattigan, recent graduate of Trinity College, have to say on the reading fare of the modern student?

First of all, Miss Rattigan expressed approval of the Victorians.

Jane Austen Favored.

Then she bore out Miss Critchfield's opinion the moderns were not so popular with the average college student as the older writers. She suggested Jane Austen as being probably in highest favor with her classmates.

Did Miss Rattigan, herself, prefer prose writers to poets?

No, she liked both. She was in fact particularly fond of Victorian poets.

"Browning is my favorite at present," she said. "And I think I shall always be interested in his dramatic monologues—'Rabbi Ben Ezra,' 'My Last Duchess' and 'Andrea del Sarto'—as well as his shorter poems."

Was she equally as enthusiastic over the poetry of another famous Victorian, Tennyson?

"I don't care so much for Tennyson," she admitted. "The rhythm of such poems as 'The Brook' attracts one's attention, but the thought is not impressive."

Who were others on her list of favorites?

"I like Shelley," she asserted. "Particularly his shorter poems—'The Cloud,' and 'Indian Serenade.' And Keats in his 'Ode to the Nightingale.'"

Did she find Byron interesting?

But Byron, the Man.

Yes. But Byron, the man, the egotist, rather than Byron, the poet, she said.

Marjorie Cowles, of East Orange, N. J., a 1934 graduate of American University, sat in the reception room of the women's dormitory to give her ideas on what the average college student reads.

"Most of us haven't had time for anything but the required list," she began, "but in our spare moments we turn, for the most part, to modern poets and older novelists.

"Of the poets, I am fond of Robert Frost," she said thoughtfully, "and Edna St. Vincent Millay, but I believe the latter is losing favor with the average student."

The discussion drifted to playwrights. Miss Cowles considered Eugene O'Neil the best of the moderns, but she also liked Noel Coward and found Philip Barry in such plays as "Death Takes a Holiday" particularly appealing.

Opinions of these representative 1934 graduates would lead one to believe that whatever the taste of modern youth happens to be, it is taking its reading, as well as everything else, seriously, and that its taste is tending toward the highbrow—or, in other words, the best literature has to offer.

Careers Then No Objective

Member of Class of '84 Says They Learned Maidenly Graces.

Describes Romantic Serenades By Boys of a Nearby College.

JUST a bunch of clinging vines, waiting hopefully for big strong oaks to lean upon. That is the way women college graduates of 50 years ago are described by one of them, Mrs. Charles B. Guthrie.

"Careers for girls were unheard of when I went to school," said quiet-voiced, motherly Mrs. Guthrie yesterday afternoon at her home, 3415 Holmead place. "Our whole ambition was to get married and be successful socially. We went to college to learn maidenly graces and accomplishments. The thought of going out into the world and earning our own living would have made us swoon."

Mrs. Guthrie took her course in maidenly graces and accomplishments at Nazareth Literary Academy, not far from Louisville, Ky., one of the oldest women's colleges in the United States. She was one of 16 members of the class of '84. Today she is on her way back to Nazareth to attend a reunion of that class and to see the 1934 graduates receive their diplomas.

She admitted yesterday she can hardly wait to see all the changes that have taken place on the campus.

It Was a Simple Life.

"I understand the girls now play golf, ride horseback, row on the lake, and actually wear evening gowns for special occasions," said Mrs. Guthrie. "When I was there we led a simple life. There were long walks through the woodland, a few games of tennis, and that was about all. We wore uniforms the year 'round. Whenever we stepped out of doors we put on our bonnets to protect our complexions from sun and wind, and if I do say it myself, the girls at Nazareth had beautiful skins."

"There were no college romances, but we were a lot more romantic and sentimental than the girls of today," sighed Mrs. Guthrie. "Sometimes the young men at St. Joseph's College, about three miles from Nazareth, came to serenade us. But before they could come near our school they had to get permission from their faculty and from ours. They had to come to Nazareth before our lights were put out at 9 o'clock and they had to bring a chaperone with them. When they arrived our chaperone would herd us out on a balcony to listen to the music, but we had to stand with our backs to the young men. The banjos and guitars sounded mighty sweet."

Nazareth students 50 years ago were forbidden to put a speck of powder on their noses or to curl their hair.

"Little Women" Haircut.

"We never dreamed of bobbing our hair, but some of the more devilish students cut a bang," smiled Mrs. Guthrie.

Girls at the Kentucky school today may take teachers' training, even business and secretarial courses. But in Mrs. Guthrie's time there was only one course—the academic. This consisted of Latin, French, music, art, rhetoric, literature, philosophy and history.

"I don't think we studied as hard as college girls do today," said the woman who received her diploma 50 years ago.

"The collegienne of today would be bored to death with the placid sort of lives we led. On the other hand, we would have been scared to death at all the things she takes for granted. Sometimes it seems to me the modern woman is a little bit weary of her independence and freedom. But we were never discontented. We had no complexes and if we were frustrated or inhibited we didn't know it. Life was a simple, sweet affair for us. We were clinging vines and glad of it," concluded Mrs. Guthrie.

After College What? Post Seeks Reply

WHAT next?

That is the question facing thousands of girls now being graduated from high school and college.

Once the answer to the question was marriage. Later it was school teaching or stenography. Now, with these and other traditional occupations for women overcrowded, the young graduate must adventure in new economic fields.

What are some of the pursuits that hold the most promise for the young woman of today? How should she go about entering them? What is required in the way of personality and training of the girl who would enter the fiercely competitive economic world of today?

A series of articles by Miss Elizabeth Perrow dealing with these questions will begin Monday on the woman's page of The Post.

Miss Perrow has interviewed vocational authorities, educational directors, and leaders in professional and business fields to obtain material for this series. She will tell in her first article of the general trends of occupations for women and what is required of the girl who this June starts out job-hunting.

Manual Labor While Cooking Thing of Past

Kitchen Conveniences No Longer Out of Reach of Budgeteers.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

AFTER a leisurely stroll through the hardware department of a downtown store, a customer comes away convinced that "upon her word," there's no reason for inconvenient kitchens.

There are electric contrivances to perform the manual labor, which formerly set arms aching; there are tables, chairs, and other furnishings to make kitchen keeping the least of housework, and numerous other gadgets to attend to every need.

There's the combination stool-ladder. It can be tucked away under the table in a small kitchen and taken out to rest on during dish washing. Little steps that fold up under it come down easily and allow a short person to reach to the highest shelf with the ease of a 6-footer.

There was a time when these sold for dizzy sums. But now kitchen conveniences are bywords for budgeteers; they go for a song and dance. Unpainted ones—many women prefer to paint theirs to match a certain color scheme—are only $1.25. Others already painted are very little more.

• • • •

Check Those Pounds.

Slim waists and sylph-like hips don't vanish overnight, but women inclined to surplus avoirdupois will vouch for it—they arrive quickly unless careful check is kept.

When one considers that bathroom scales may be bought for $1.25 it's hardly reasonable that anyone should neglect keeping track of extra poundage.

It's a sad story, the one about the woman who goes on for weeks and months oblivious of the fact ice cream sodas and rich dressings are taking their toll. All at once she realizes how much weight she's gained and it takes her double the number of weeks and months to lose it, to say nothing of the trouble and the torture of dieting.

• • • •

Check-Full of Allure.

There is a new perfume making its debut in a certain downtown store.

One whiff of it does a lot of different things to different persons. To some it conjures up visions of clover fields at dusk, with a soft breeze wafting the scent of dewladen blossoms. To others it calls to mind the rich sweetness of tropical woods, the blend of hundreds of unknown flowers. Some will declare it's the fragrance of one flower, a lovely, mysterious flower.

There does seem to be a mysterious quality to its fragrance, an illusiveness always attendant on fine perfume. It was made for the mood and minute, and changes its charm to suit these.

• • • •

For Roasting Corn.

Like corn on the cob? Try roasting it! First thing you'll need will be a molded aluminum pan with a close fitting cover—there's the right one in a downtown store. Then proceed in the following fashion:

Remove husks and silk and soak a few of the inner husks in water for 10 or 15 minutes. Remove from water without draining or shaking and place them in the bottom of the pan. Cover the pan and set it over one-half of a full gas flame or electric unit set at medium. When steaming starts, turn to lowest point, or turn off electric unit and allow to steam 10 or 15 minutes without lifting cover. Serve with butter. Yum!

• • • •

Guaranteed to Lather.

When a downtown store bought a large supply of soap, they planned to put it on sale during June. They thought they had enough to last for at least 30 days—and maybe a little for a "left-over" special. But no sooner had they placed the soap on the counter than it began to go. The stock room was constantly on the phone for new supplies.

All this began a week ago. There's been such a phenomenal demand it looks as though the middle of the month will see it all gone. So—shoppers interested in acquiring a large box of freely lathering soap, guaranteed to make suds a-plenty in hard or soft water, should put in their orders early. There's a buttermilk variety in the rainbow colors. The rose-scented is pink, the jasmine blue, the bouquet, green; the lilac, ivory; the violet, orchid, and the verbena yellow. A dozen cakes for 65 cents.

Another variety also comes in a wide assortment of delicate odors. It, too, is sure to lather. Six cakes for 42 cents.

• • • •

Animal Bookends.

Both animal lovers and bargain hunters will develop a yen for the bookends in the gift department of an F street shop.

Somebody who had a knack for carving did a splendid job on some wooden blocks. Somebody else with a knack for tinting did an equally good job on the finishing touches. The result is a choice of bookends in the shape of dogs, owls, and other feathered and featherless creatures. They're priced at $1.

Drop Cookies Ideal Hot Weather Accessory Dish

One Reason Being the Slight Amount of Effort That Goes Into Their Making; No Rolling Nor Shaping—Just Dropping.

By Ann Barrett.

GOOD old-fashioned cookies have lost none of their charm. Singing Ruth Etting will take them in place of cake any day. Plump drop cookies—bumpy with fruit and nuts. Old-fashioned fork cookies tasting of butter and brown sugar. New-fashioned refrigerator cookies, thin and crisp.

All these you might call ideal summer cookies because they're so easily made. No rolling and shaping. Just drop 'em or slice 'em, and there you are.

As in this extra-good recipe for oatmeal cookies. (The whole wheat flour makes them taste especially good, I think.)

Oatmeal Cookies.

First cream ½ cup butter with 1 cup brown sugar (well-packed). Then add 2 whole eggs (slightly beaten). Next, mix the following ingredients and combine them with first mixture: ¾ cup whole wheat flour, 2 cups quick-cooking oatmeal (uncooked), ¼ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon soda, ¾ teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, ¾ cup each raisins and coarsely chopped walnuts. This will make a thick, stiff mixture. Spoon this up in pieces about the size of English walnuts. Shape these round with the fingers, and put them 2 inches apart on a buttered cookie sheet. Then press them out (with wet knife or fork) about ¼ inch thick. Bake at 400 degrees Fahrenheit till delicately browned. (Note: I think these taste best of all this way. But you can also bake them in the original little balls. This makes you a smaller, thicker cooky. Or you can spread the mixture about ¼ inch thick in a buttered pan; and as soon as mixture is baked, cut it into sticks about 1½ by 4 inches.)

Fork Cookies.

Here's another quick cooky recipe—fork cookies, an old farm favorite: First work 1 cup butter till soft and creamy. Then work in 2 cups brown sugar (packed down in cup) and add 2 eggs, well-beaten. Next sift together 3½ cups sifted general-purpose flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons each of cream of tartar and baking soda (or 4 teaspoons baking powder). Stir these dry ingredients into first mixture. Then add 1 cup coarsely-chopped walnuts and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Then, with the hands, shape this stiff mixture into balls about the size of English walnuts. Put these on a greased cooky sheet at least 2 inches apart. Then press each ball down with a fork, till it is about ¼ inch thick. Bake in a quick oven (about 375 degrees Fahrenheit) till nicely browned.

Refrigerator Nut Cookies.

Refrigerator cookies take longer to make, because the dough should chill overnight. But after that the going is easy. Here's how:

First work ¾ cup butter till creamy. Then gradually beat in 1½ cups brown sugar and 1 cup granulated sugar, and add 2 well-beaten eggs. Next sift together 3¾ cups sifted general purpose flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Add 1 cup walnuts (be sure they're very finely chopped) and 2 teaspoons vanilla. Mix into a stiff dough and form into two rolls, each about 2 inches thick. Wrap these in waxed paper. (Or pack mixture into a deep, narrow loaf pan.) Chill mixture overnight. When ready to bake, slice as thin as possible with a very sharp, thin-bladed knife. Place on ungreased baking sheets, and bake in a hot oven (about 425 F.).

Note—To turn these into chocolate cookies, just add 2 squares (ounces) cooking chocolate to butter-sugar-egg mixture. (Melt this first.)

Send for Ice Cream Recipes.

This kind of cooky is nothing short of grand for serving with ice creams and ices. So, if you'd also like recipes for these most popular of all frozen desserts, my bulletin "Sure Ways to Success With Ice Cream and Sauces" will prove useful, I'm sure. This tells all the ins and outs of making plain vanilla, chocolate and fruit ice creams, mousses, parfait and fruit ices. It also gives recipes for chocolate and butterscotch sauce for serving on ice cream—besides other popular recipes. # What Today Means

"Gemini."

If June 9 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. and from 10:30 until midnight.

There will be very little doing in business activities, this date falling on Saturday, and comparatively few transactions involving money. You may be unfortunate enough to meet an individual, who desiring to impress on people his intellectual attainments and to gratify his own desire to hear himself talk, assumes the posture of being an extremist on any topic that affords an excuse for radical statements. It will be advisable not to offend this man, or engage in any form of argument with him.

If you are a woman and your natal day is June 9, you have a very distinctive personality. Frankness is an admirable virtue, but always a diplomatic one. You may find life easier, and far more pleasant, if you refrain from telling people just exactly what your thoughts are on subjects of a decidedly personal nature. You will be happy in either a commercial or a domestic career.

The child born on June 9, when it arrives at school age, should prove a very attractive and popular youngster. Be cautious its popularity does not make it conceited or snobbish. It might prove advisable to carefully supervise its homework and not allow outside social activities to divert its attention. Try and develop in this child a fondness for books.

The man born on June 9, usually is a decidedly strong character, with a desire to dominate those with whom he is thrown into close contact. If born on this date, you have a fine sense of justice, and people having confidence in your fairness will trust you implicitly. You may find this characteristic will be largely responsible for your success, so live up to it. If you marry, your home life should prove ideal, but do not try to dominate your wife. A good rule to follow on June 9 is: "Safety first."

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

The Best Worm Medicine.

All medicines with enough physiologic action to be of value are poisonous when given in large doses.

In the selection of worm medicines this margin of safety must be borne constantly in mind. The choice of the medicine depends first on the kind of worm that is to be removed; second, on the efficacy of the medicine, and, third, upon its safety to the person using it.

Probably the best of all worm medicines, all things considered, is hexylresorcinal, given in the form of sugar-coated pills. It poisons the worms without being absorbed by the host. It therefore does practically no harm to the liver, kidneys or intestinal wall. It is not especially poisonous to people who have been drinking or who have just taken castor oil, as is the case with the tetrachlorides. The dose is 15 grains for an adult and children in proportion. It should be taken on an empty stomach, and without a laxative.

Against hookworms and round worms hexylresorcinal is the best of all worm medicines. Against whip worm, tape worm and thread worm it is less effective. The best remedy against whip worm is the milk of wild fig; against tapeworm, male fern and pomegranate.

The safer and better of the medicines of the tetrachloride group is tetrachlorethylene. It is less toxic than carbon tetrachloride, less of it is absorbed from the gastrointestinal tract, and it endangers the liver and kidneys less.

The dose of tetraclorethylene or carbon tetrachloride is 3 minims for each year of age; with an adult dose of 45 to 60 minims. In certain parts of the world they give a mixture of 1 part oil of chenopodium and 2 to 3 parts tetraclorethylene or of carbon tetrachloride. The dose is 1 minim for each year of life up to 9; then 2 minims for each year until the adult dose of 35 minims is reached. It is often given in a full dose of saturated solution of salts. Oil is to be avoided.

Rose Cup Wins First Prize as Novel Appetizer

A New Soup, Iced Tomato Cucumber, Comes Off With Second.

By Susan Mills.

VARIED and delightful recipes came in this week. Washington housewives have some excellent ideas on dinner "beginnings."

To Miss Mary Perkins, 1743 Columbia road, the first prize is awarded for her recipe, "Rose Cup." Second prize goes to Miss Kay Smith, 1223 Vermont avenue, for an unusual and appetizing cold soup. For two novel appetizers, third prize is given to Mrs. E. Tucker, Annapolis, Md.

There were several contributions that will be considered in next week's contest. They were tomato recipes.

Honorable mention is awarded to Mrs. Charles C. Kennon, Mrs. E. R. Evans, Miss Katie V. Marple, Mrs. Hubert German and Miss Ethel Merritt. Their recipes will be published from time to time on this page.

The prize winning recipes follow in order:

Rose Cup.

1½ cups watermelon balls
1½ cups honeydew melon balls
1 pint ginger ale
¼ cup grenadine
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup peeled seedless grapes

Blend the fruits, combine with grenadine, lemon juice and chill. Just before serving add ginger ale.

Ice Tomato Cucumber Soup.

6 fresh tomatoes
2 medium cucumbers
1 tablespoon mild vinegar
1 small onion
1 clove garlic (optional)
1 quart white stock or water
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon sugar

Peel and slice tomatoes and cucumbers. Set aside in cool place about ½ cup cucumbers and pour vinegar over them. Cook remaining cucumbers, tomatoes, onion, garlic, stock or water and seasoning. When well cooked strain, press through a sieve as much pulp as possible. Chill throughly. Just before serving and uncooked cucumbers and vinegar.

Carrot Balls.

Mix cream cheese with salt, pepper, paprika and Worchestershire sauce if desired. Chop carrots finely or grate. Mix with cheese, make into balls the size of butter balls. Insert a toothpick into each and serve on a platter surrounding smoked salmon which has been cut in thin slices and rolled.

Conceits.

Use any brick form cheese. Cut in squares a quarter inch thick. Sprinkle well with paprika and place half an English walnut in center. Serve with crisped potato chips.

Tomato Ideas Next Week's Recipe Theme

SHALL we put our heads together over the tomato next week? Because the week just passed has been National Tomato Week, and because this vegetable is so good and plentiful at this time, the subject of the contest will be tomatoes. So send in your recipes for delicious tomato preparations to Susan Mills, The Washington Post.

The prizes will be the same: $3, $2, and $1. All contributions should be received on or before Thursday of next week.

The Talking Sparrow Murders

BY DARWIN TEILHET

MISCHA whispered, "I saw the Polizeidirektor stop you. I hid when you two came back. I was afraid to tell the driver"—she motioned to our chauffeur—"that you had been stopped. I didn't know what to do; I could only try to persuade him to hold the car for a few minutes. If you hadn't come down when you did I was going back for you." She opened her purse, showed me the little automatic nestling in it. "That might have made Kresch let you go."

It was 4 in the afternoon by the time the big police car brought Mischa and me back to the pension. The Heidelberg police had stopped us at Karlsruhe. I didn't see Carlson at first, when Mischa and I entered my room. Kresch had his wide back to us. He didn't look around. You could see the purplish scar on his neck and the frayed ear, and there was a pink welt on his head which showed underneath the grayish hair.

He was directing the photographer who was taking pictures of Carlson. He said to stand to one side, but I was over Carlson by now. There he was. Asleep with his hand resting on one arm outstretched on my desk. Kresch was making grumbling noises. The photographer was complaining. And there was Carlson asleep for all eternity. . . .

His temple had a small red puncture in it. The string of blood twisted down from the blue veins in the temple. It twisted down along the shoulder and arm to the green blotter. Kresch walked up to me and said brusquely, "Herr Carlson left you a note." Mischa sat down on the window ledge. She was pretending to look out toward the mountains.

Internes Came.

Two internes from the hospital came in. The two internes placed Carlson's body on the stretcher. Kresch, slowly puffing his cigar, as if it were imported from Havana and not made in southern Bavaria, shut the door behind him. He handed me the note, sat down. "Your company lawyers will know what to do with the body. Better read the note."

Dear Bill: Well, your little devil has played hob with my plans. I got here, found the bonds gone and her note. With the bonds I might still have a chance to clear out, but I'm washed up now. I shouldn't have taken the name "S. N. la Roc" in the first place, but I never can remember names and I had to have one to speculate with Peletier et Cie, so I thought of the anagram of my name I used when I was a kid. It was smart enough until Mischa worked it out. She's too smart. You're wondering how Taubek got into this, I suppose? Spalger went with me because he had to. I caught him stealing the company's money. I needed him to work the books and the French speculation was too good to miss. Spalger arranged to get me a Mannheim address. The idiot let his friend know what we were doing. Taubek blackmailed me for a cut, threatening to squeal.

Spalger Shot Him.

Taubek helped Spalger capture Walter Kolhmann after Spalger told us Walther was on to the books. We didn't mean for anything to happen to Walther, but the kid escaped the morning of the 27th. Taubek went to the hotel to feed him, found him gone, didn't think about the damned sewer but called me up. That's why I wasn't at the plant. I was afraid you'd remember. You didn't, thank God. My silk speculation was due in a few days. Instead of getting out of the country when Taubek telephoned, I corralled Spalger who was just leaving for lunch and we met Taubek. We arrived just as the news-stand kid was beating it with the note. I took Spalger and went after the kid, Taubek ducked upstairs in Geigen's building. We were too late to stop the kid so I told Spalger to get out and catch him, planning to kidnap him, but Spalger, the damn fool, shot him.

You know the rest. I shot Taubek at the inn. I knew Taubek was blackmailing Elaine; had to let him do it as we were running out of money and those damned French bonds didn't come. I'd ordered the bonds sent. Wanted to wait until they arrived. After you told me you had left Mischa at the inn I called Taubek. Told him Mischa was at the inn alone. Then called Geigen, muffled my voice, said I was Taubek. Having Geigen at the inn, with Taubek dead, threw the trail off me because I knew Kresch would find that bullet mark in the window and I thought he might suspect Geigen had sneaked back from Munich. I was afraid Kresch would start checking up on me and I had to wait for those bonds. Thought if I could get rid of Taubek, who was going to let me down, it'd be safe to wait. And you gave me the opportunity. Show this to Kresch. There's no chance for me to escape with no money to buy my way out and the way Kresch is acting, I know he's got on to me. I said I'd have you free in time for your job. Well, I will even. . . .

He Was at Desk.

I stared at the place where the note ended.

Kresch rolled his cigar between the heavy lips. "When I regained consciousness in the bathroom, Herr Tat-zohn, I heard some one in your room. I looked out cautiously. It was Herr Carlson sitting at your desk, writing. He had entered while I was knocked out. Fortunately, he had not taken the trouble to look in the bathroom. I waited about five minutes. I wanted him to finish writing. But I must have inadvertently made a noise. He swung around."

Kresch puffed his cigar several times. "I shot quicker. You see," he explained apologetically, "I had my gun already out."

"Did you have to shoot him? From his note he was going to commit suicide."

"I think when he saw me he decided to take me along as company. Herr Carlson was always able to change his plans in a hurry."

"So you killed him?"

"I thought I might be needed," he explained with false modesty, "a little longer in Heidelberg."

I looked once more at Mischa, who had remained silent. "Then you knew Carlson was—la Roc?"

Acted Too Soon.

He cleared his throat. "That was what I was about to tell you when you called me into the bathroom, Herr Tat-zohn." He rubbed his head, puffed the cigar for a moment. "Herr Carlson was too clever at the inn. As I started to say to you, if it wasn't for the girl—for Fraulein Dryshenzoff—being there, no one would have been killed. And you see, Herr Carlson was the only one who knew she was there, except for yourself and me."

I crumpled up the note in my hand, then uncrumpled it and started to fold it. "But the innkeeper. . . . We decided he telephoned Taubek."

Kresch placed himself in the middle of the room where he could observe both Mischa and myself. "You thought so, Herr Tat-zohn. I wished you to think so. You see, there was no logical answer to explain why the innkeeper did not telephone Herr Taubek at once if he—the innkeeper—had recognized the Fraulein. No need for him to have waited until the morning."

He nodded at Mischa. She remained silent. "However, I was certain the innkeeper did not recognize her. I knew he did not."

"How?"

Not for Long.

"You told me so yourself from the very first. You said the innkeeper refused to let you both in. He didn't know who either of you were. If he had, you would not have had difficulty in making him let you in. But despite the fact that the innkeeper did not know who you were, Herr Taubek did come to the inn for the Fraulein. And later, Herr Geigen arrived. I asked myself how did they happen to come? Why? And the answer was very simple. Herr Carlson was the only other person except yourself and myself who knew the Fraulein was there. And again, Herr Carlson knew—from you this time, too—that you and the Fraulein had just escaped from Herr Taubek. And he knew you would tell me so."

"But for a time didn't you think Mischa was—guilty?"

"Not for long," he replied. "I thought she was more involved than she was, after she escaped from the inn. But as soon as I realized Herr Carlson's strategy, I immediately appreciated that she was not actively concerned in the solution."

Beaver Dam Golf Title to McCarthy

Host Club Star Scores Over Roger Peacock in Final, 1 Up.

Wins After Stymieing Rival on 18th Green; Foe Falters.

MARTIN F. McCARTHY, boat club star and former District baseball star, defeated Roger Peacock, Indian Spring star, 1 up, in the final of the Beaver Dam invitation tournament yesterday.

Peacock, who had been setting a terrific pace around the golf course for his previous rounds, faltered badly in his match with McCarthy, but was 1 up at the end of nine holes, due to some erratic putting on the part of his foe. McCarthy started out badly by 3-putting the first hole and Peacock went 1 up. McCarthy rapped in a 12-footer for a birdie on the second hole, to even the matter. On the fourth hole McCarthy again 3-putted after his ball had hit Rogers' father in the foot and bounced back on the green. The ball was headed for the woods until Mr. Peacock helped him out. Peacock went 2 up at No. 5 as McCarthy again 3-putted, but McCarthy cut his deficit in half by winning the sixth with a par 4. The rest of the holes on the outgoing nine were halved.

Two Down at Tenth.

McCarthy went 2 down at the tenth as Peacock sank his putt for a birdie. McCarthy made a gallant comeback and won the next three holes in a row as Peacock scattered shots all over the course. On the thirteenth hole Peacock was stymied by a tree on his second shot and holed out in 5 as McCarthy sank a 6-foot putt for his par.

On the short fourteenth McCarthy blew a 2-foot putt to go two up as they both got down in four. Again on the sixteenth hole, McCarthy missed a short putt for a birdie. Peacock was in the trap in three, but made a splendid recovery to keep the match alive. Both were down in threes on the seventeenth as McCarthy just missed a deuce.

On the home hole, both were over in two. McCarthy was away and played first. His ball was past the pin about 5 feet. Peacock played his ball short about 3 feet. McCarthy missed his putt, but laid Peacock a dead stymie. Peacock, after studying his short a few minutes, tried to cut his ball around McCarthy's, but to no avail. They shook hands as Peacock conceded McCarthy his putt.

Earlier in the morning McCarthy defeated John Miller, 4 and 2, to go into the finals, while Peacock beat Parker Noland, 3 and 2.

The consolation of the first flight was won by Forrest Thompson, who beat Eddie Stolark in the morning and won over Frank Bagett, 3 and 2, in the afternoon.

Cruickshank Leads Open With 142

Adds 71 to 71 and Tops Sarazen in Second by Three Strokes.

Final 36 Holes Today; Wood Is Disqualified, Hits Wrong Ball.

Sixty-four made the grade for tomorrow's play. Scores of 155 or better got in.

The keenest disappointment of the day was the announcement late today that Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J., had been disqualified for returning an incorrect score. Such was the fate suffered last year in the open at North Shore by Paul Runyan, Westchester, N. Y., pro, who qualified today with 152.

Plays Wrong Ball.

Wood, leading money winner of the 1932-33 season, and favored by many of the experts to win this year's open, hit his tee shot into the rough of the sixteenth hole. He played out, only to discover that it was not his own ball. Returning, he played his own ball, got a 4 and recorded as such. The U. S. G. A., after a lengthy discussion, disqualified him on the ground that he had returned an incorrect score. He was punished because he failed to add a 2-stroke penalty when his score was turned in, a penalty now imposed under the new rules. Had he played under similar circumstances last year there would have been no penalty.

The rules specify that in a competitive tournament the golfer who strokes a ball other than his own shall be penalized 2 strokes. He shall then, according to the rules, play his own ball.

Wood had a 75—73 total at the halfway mark, and was only 6 shots from the pacesetter when he learned of his disqualification.

Drama, Excitement.

The day was crammed with drama and excitement as National stars who yesterday looked back on their first 18-hole rounds with tears in their eyes made glorious comebacks to put themselves back in the running.

There was Tommy Armour, the silver-haired Scot, who won the open title in 1927. He took an 82 yesterday. Today he clicked. His 72 for a 154 total was in the charmed circle by one stroke.

There was Lawson Little, the 23-year-old British amateur champion, who played with reckless abandon to score a 72 after his 83 of Thursday appeared too high to warrant a comeback. This bold Californian, knowing that he needed a 34 to qualify for the final day's battle, played his heart out, and got by with 155. The outlook appeared dark for Little as he reached the home green today. He hooked his second shot over the practice green, near the stairway of the clubhouse, and played a magnificent recovery over high trees near the green and rammed home a 25-foot putt for the par 4 that eventually qualified him.

Cards Slam French As Pirates Lose, 6-2

St. Louis, June 8 (AP).—Larry French, usually a nemesis to the Cardinals, was easy for them today, the Redbirds winning the series opener from the Pittsburgh Pirates, 6 to 2.

Tex Carleton, the slim right-hander, let the Pirates down with six hits and was in trouble in only one inning, the seventh, when Arky Vaughan touched him for a home run and Jensen and Grace followed with doubles.

Tigers Blast Chisox, 13-5, In Opener

Pound Three Pitchers for 18 Hits, Retain League Lead.

Fred Marberry Touched for 14 Blows, but Goes Route.

DETROIT, June 8 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers continued their slam-bang conquest of the American League today, hammering out a 13-to-5 victory over the Chicago White Sox in the series opened.

Mickey Cochrane's boys collected 18 hits off the combined offerings of Earnshaw, Gallivan and Kinzy, the latter a recruit from Texas Christian College who made his major league debut today. The Sox, on the other hand, got 14 hits off Fred Marberry, who went the route for the Tigers. Each of the clubs chalked up a home run, the circuit blows coming from the bats of Madjeski and Fox.

Gehringer Bat Star.

Charlie Gehringer, who has been on a hitting spree since Detroit returned to Navin Field, had another perfect day at bat, getting four hits in four appearances. He has hit safely in 12 of the 17 trips he has made to the plate during Detroit's current home stand.

Browns in 3d Place By Beating Tribe, 8-6

Cleveland, June 8 (AP).—Roger Hornsby's St. Louis Browns took third place away from the Indians today by defeating the Tribe, 8 to 6, in a ninth-inning rally that netted two runs without the benefit of a base hit.

The Browns, who had been helpless for five innings before the pitching of Willis Hudlin, put over a run in the sixth inning and made five more to take the lead in the seventh inning. Burns' home run over the right field screen with two on climaxed the attack.

Max Baer Fit, Doctors Say; Fight On

"Swindle," Brown Asserts, but He Is Overruled After Tests.

NEW YORK, une 8 (AP).—The fantastic comic opera battle of the build-downs swept back into existence today on the word of three doctors that Max Baer is in fit condition to fight Primo Carnera for the heavyweight championship of the world next Thursday night.

A lame, white-haired little Irishman, Bill Brown, third man on the New York State Athletic Commission, stood like a crippled Horatio at the bridge, sticking doggedly to his opinion that it was "all a swindle," but he could not stay the rush alone.

The oratory was terrific, crowds gathered in the streets, sound cameras ground, flashlight bulbs popped and at least 100 newspapermen from one end of the country to the other massed in the commission offices as they haven't massed since the day ancient Paddy Mullins, manager of Harry Wills, popped Jack Dempsey on the chin with his Sunday left hook for refusing to fight the Black Panther.

All Very Different.

It was all very sedate, however, compared to the scene in Baer's training camp at Asbury Park, N. J., yesterday, where Brown brought this all on by declaring that in his opinion the curly-headed Californian couldn't fight a lick, needed at least another month of training and, in fact, shouldn't be allowed to fight at all if the day's workout was any indication of his ability.

So both Baer and Carnera were ordered to appear today for examination and Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the commission, took charge. Three commission doctors, William Walker, Vincent Nardiello and Morris Beyer, tapped, prodded, surveyed the athletes, read dials, and listened intently at awesome instruments. They wrote out a long report while everyboy fidgeted and the gist of it was this:

"Our opinion on both these boxers, which we have reached unanimously, is that they are both in splendid physical condition, and we fully believe that they are physically able to engage in this contest of 15 rounds of boxing."

Giants Bow, 3-2, To Phils' Rookie

Philadelphia, June 8 (AP).—Curt Davis, rookie right-hander from Azusa, Calif., checked the Giants for the second time within a week today to give the Phillies a 3-to-2 triumph in the series opener.

Davis gave the Giants only six hits, half of them in the eighth inning, while the Phils banged Joe Bowman's slants for 11 safeties. A New York error figured in the scoring of each Philly run.

Arab Holds Modern Times Safe to Win in Feature Race at Charles Town Track

Rollick Third At Mile and Sixteenth

Daily Double of Aella and Sand Bell Pays $60.30 Mutuel.

By Walter Haight.
(Post Staff Correspondent).

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., June 8.—W. M. Hunt really put his hard-earned dollars in the right spot when he tossed money in the claiming box and led away Arab, a 6-year-old son of Kai-Sang. He turned the horse over to Trainer Kuykendall and Arab since has been transformed from one of the most inconsistent of platers into Mr. Consistency himself. In fact, after today's demonstration, I have decided to cancel his membership to the "we-beat-each-other" club. Of course, I shall always have his dues money handy for future use.

Today, Arab was a picture of motion. He was installed the favorite and looked and ran every inch as the public expected, despite the presence of Yowell in the saddle. He was away winging, bounded right to the front and stayed there throughout the mile and a sixteenth test.

Modern Times also maintained second position through all the running, but never seriously threatened the leader. Rollick rolled into third money after something of a contest with Cantroud and Repeal. No Mistake, the other member of the group, was a mistake from start to finish.

Arab was just a so-and-so favorite and paid a $5.20 mutuel.

A second choice and a favorite teamed to score in the daily double. The combination was Sand Bell and Aella and the parlay bet paid a $60.30 mutuel. It was a day for form players with Sand Bell's individual payoff of $12.60 the best of the program.

Ideal weather prevailed and a better-than-average week-day crowd witnessed the hoss racing over a lightning fast course.

SAND BELL, under stout restraint until straightened into the stretch, closed very fast on the outside and was going away at end. PINK POST, a forward contender at all times, came through on inside and wore NORA'S GRACE down at the end. Latter showed high speed, but weakened under pressure.

SECOND RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-old maidens. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 2:27. Off at 2:28½. Winner, K. Churchill's b. g. VOCO, much the best, was repeatedly taken back on the back stretch, came around CANTER CHORD in the stretch and won on his courage. CANTER CHORD, away very slowly, secured racing room on the inside to take command on the back stretch; saved ground thereafter, but was not good enough. SELFISH GAIN, a forward factor at all times, closed well.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:47. Off at 3:48. Winner, W. M. Hunt's b. g. (6), by Kai Sang—Katrina. Trained by M. Kuykendall. Time, 1:47 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRACE BUNTING, $6.60, $4.40, $3.40; DUTIFUL, $23 20, $13.20; CAPTOR, $3.60.

GRACE BUNTING raced within reach of the leaders until straightened into stretch, came around and won driving. CAPTOR, and SMALL CHANGE in the drive, but had to be hard ridden to the finish. DUTIFUL, slow to find her best speed, closed with a rush, but could not get to the winner. CAPTOR, a forward factor throughout while racing on the outside, hung on well. BLACK DREAMS raced evenly and closed well while saving ground. DAISY BUCK, slow to get going, closed some ground. SMALL CHANGE stopped.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:46. Off at 4:50. Winner, Mrs. K. Newman's b. m. (6), by Catalan—Medler. Trained by O. Newman. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:25 3-5, 0:50, 1:17 3-5, 1:42 3-5, 1:56 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS CATALAN, $8.60, $3.80, $3.80; KING BIRD, $3.20, $3.00; FOREST FAUN, $5.00.

MISS CATALAN, going in her best form, secured racing room on the inside on the last turn to take command and drew out to win in hand. KING BIRD, forced to race wide in the early stages, closed with good speed, wore down FOREST FAUN, but could not get to the winner. FOREST FAUN, a forward factor from the start, took a short lead on the back stretch, could not withstand the bid of the winner, but held on well. ARMAGEDDON showed good speed in spots, but tired. FREE ADVICE had good early speed, but stopped.

with Bill Bennings.

Charles Town, June 8.

Dear Al:

They had us tied to the sixteenth pole today for four straight races. Bennings horses were running everywhere except on the top of the heap, where we are trying to put them. However, we began clicking in the fifth and knocked off the next three in a row to save the day. Those that got home were Arab, Grace Bunting and Miss Catalan. Not a whole lot of price, but they provided a go-home parlay that would insure supper money in any family. Jockey Eddie Ambrose and the stewards will be watching the second race closely tomorrow. Hacky H. will be running, and this is the horse that Ambrose was riding when the officials set him down to investigate. However, a victory for Hacky will not convict Ambrose.

BILL.

First race—Nay Nay can take care of these at a good mutuel, according to Clocker Mike. He wants all his friends to get down on this one. I prefer Pukka Heaven and Muskoday. You probably like Holland and Mordrom. But that's what makes horse racing.

Second race—Schley B. won for us the other day at good odds. He is fit as a fiddle and ready to take care of these. Hacky H. had the finger of suspicion pointed his way the other day. He will be out for top dough today. Bulletin for the show end.

Third race—Serenabit and Busy Ike appear to be the most likely to battle it out for this purse. However, the field is jammed with fair sprinters. Tuleyries Wand, The Gen and Handley could be dangerous.

Fourth race—Hurdy Gurdy, Polydee and By Surprise have all won for the Bennings interests since the meeting got under way. I prefer them in the order named.

Fifth race—Washout has a way of getting out in front and staggering to the finish line. That's what I expect him to do tomorrow, but I believe he will be far enough in front to last to the line. Vacillate and Jim Moss probably are the best of the others.

Sixth race—I'm giving Rustic Cuba another chance. Gets back to his favorite distance tomorrow. Black Dreams and Barcelona Pete to fill the place and show positions.

Seventh race—Nisia and Palumbo is the combination I am depending upon to get us a fair-sized mutuel. Changeable and Aldershot to complete the money picture.

Eighth race—Fusco could come right back with a victory in this company. Hosain, an easy winner last out, and Sisko to do the chief chasing.

Stocks Jump 3.7 Points on Buoyant Sales

Advance Is One of Widest This Year; Turnover, 1,607,420 Shares.

New York, June 8 (AP).—Stocks emerged from the doldrums today and stepped out into one of the widest advances the market has staged this year.

The buying movement converged upon old-line market leaders like American Can, American Telephone, Santa Fe, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, Du Pont, New York Central and U. S. Steel common, lifting them for net gains of 1 to 5 points.

The market assumed a buoyant tone as it moved out of the narrow range it has occupied for more than three weeks, following culmination of the spring decline in mid-May.

Aids to Upswing.

No clear-cut explanation of the rise was discernible in the day's news, although trade reports, the new Federal bankruptcy measure, ending of price-fixing by the NRA and hopes that a steel strike would be averted, all contributed to improvement in underlying sentiment.

The Standard Statistics Co. average price of 90 stocks was 3.7 points higher at 80.8, the largest gain in one session since January 1. Sales on the stock exchange expanded to 1,607,420 shares from 467,150 in the preceding session. It was the busiest day on the exchange since May 14.

The spotlight shifted to stocks as additional rains relieved drought areas and speculation in commodities waned.

Dollar Is Steady.

While an undercurrent of inflationary sentiment persisted in speculative quarters, it was not apparent in the foreign exchange market, where the dollar was steady.

The narrow sidewise movements of stocks lately, with trading dwindling to the smallest volume in a decade, had led some market analysts to believe that a base had been built for a broad advance, and once the market showed an inclination to move forward, buying came in from many sources.

Standard investment stocks were taken in sizable blocks and prices advanced easily. Du Pont jumped 5 points to 90. Allied Chemical was 5½ points higher at the close and gains of 3 to 4 points were recorded in Corn Products, J. I. Case, Spiegel-May-Stern, J. C. Penney, R. H. Macy, Bethlehem Steel preferred, Chrysler, Hercules Powder, Underwood-Elliott-Fisher and Louisville & Nashville.

Merchandise, motors, steels and other industrial groups led the advance, but the buying was general through the list.

Rails followed the industrials, ignoring a more-than-sensational decline of 46,026 cars in rail freight movement last week to 578,541 cars, Memorial Day accounted for the bulk of the loss in traffic. The Dun & Bradstreet weekly trade review was reassuring, pointing to further retail trade gains.

Total Tax Receipts of the Government During the Last Eleven Months Have Not Been Sufficient to Cover Federal Relief Expenditures.

By Ralph West Robey.

In view of the extraordinary powers being given the President to spend some four or five billion dollars as he sees fit it is interesting to look in the question of just how much we are devoting to relief at present. Everyone knows, of course, that the amount is large. I wonder, however, how many people realize that during the first eleven months of this fiscal year the Federal Government spent more in relief than it received from all taxes. Or put it this way: Between July 1, 1933 and May 31, 1934, every cent that the Federal Government received from taxes, and then some, was devoted to "relief", with the result that every penny used to meet the ordinary expenses of the Government had to be borrowed.

This is such an incredible situation from the point of view of sound finance that one automatically wants to see the actual figures in order to make sure that there is not some trick in the calculation. Unfortunately such figures can not be presented in detail. This is because the daily statement of the Treasury now is issued in such a manner that an outsider can make only an incomplete listing of the items representing relief. Enough can be picked out of the statement, nevertheless, to show that the above conclusion errs on the side of conservatism, rather than the reverse.

CWA and FERA Have Taken Over One-Third of Income.

If one were to list the major items in the order of the certainty that they contain nothing but relief, CWA and FERA, I suppose, would come first. Through May 31 the total spent through these organizations amounted to $954,000,000. Total receipts of all kinds by the Government between July 1, 1933, and May 31, 1934, was $2,725,000,000. The expenditure through CWA and FERA, therefore, was 35 per cent of the total.

Next, probably, should be the outlay for the emergency conservation work—the CCC. This also contains nothing but relief. Through May 31 we spent $290,000,000 for this. This is equal to 10.6 per cent of the total receipts of the Government.

Thirdly, one may take outlays through the AAA and the Farm Credit Administration. These expenditures, of course, are relief just as truly as the CWA, but they are made upon a somewhat different theory. In any listing of "relief" expenditures, however, they must be included. Through May 31 they amounted to $405,000,000, or 14.9 per cent of the total receipts of the Government.

Final of the great and clear-cut relief items is the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. This differs from the CWA and CCC in that it extends funds to business units rather than to individuals, but it is relief just the same. From July 1, 1933, to May 31, 1934, the net advances of this organization amounted to $1,446,000,000, or 53.1 per cent of the total receipts of the Government.

Many More Items Might Be Included in List.

There are, needless to say, many more items that would have to be included to make the list complete—public works expenditures, loans to railroads, municipalities, &c., relief extended to mortgagors, and the innumerable other means that have been devoted for coming to the aid of this or that group. The daily statement of the Treasury, however, is not sufficiently clear on most of these to make it possible to pick out the relief element in these items.

For the present purpose, too the inclusion of these other items is not essential. From the four already listed one gets a total amount equal to 114 per cent of all receipts from taxation by the Government. This should be sufficient to indicate how completely we have thrown the sound principles of fiscal finance out of the window in our mad drive on the road to inflation.

Bonds Advance Under Lead of 2d Grade Lists

Speculative Loans Also Close Higher; Sales Up to $13,482,000.

New York, June 8 (AP).—A brisk upturn in second-grade and speculative corporate issues was the feature of today's bond market.

High-grade loans and government bonds were firm, but trading in them was comparatively quiet as buyers concentrated in the low-priced railroad, industrial and utility liens, dozens of which advanced 1 to 2 or more points.

Transfers totaled $13,482,000, par value, compared with $10,382,000 on Thursday, and the Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate loans firmed three-tenths of a point at 86.1, the highest in more than three weeks.

Decline Is Noted.

Of the total, the turnover in Government issues was approximately $1,400,000 compared with $2,500,000 yesterday.

Labor difficulties in the steel industry appeared more likely to be settled and business news was a little better. There was marked improvement in sentiment concerning the low-priced obligations of many of the country's carriers and strength in this group was sufficient to bring about a general advance in the secondary bonds of a considerable number of other corporations.

The upturn coincided with substantial gains made by stocks.

Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific issues enjoyed a heavy turnover and advanced, 1½ to nearly 2½ points. Other railroad bonds advancing 1 to 2 points included loans of the B. & O., Boston & Maine, Central of Georgia, Colorado Fuel & Iron, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Illinois Central, Missouri, Kansas & Texas, Missouri Pacific, New Haven, Pere Marquette, Southern Railway and Southern Pacific.

List of Gainers.

A wide assortment of other loans were higher, including those of American Water Works, B. F. Goodrich, International Telephone, International Paper, North American Co., North American Edison, Pacific Gas & Electric, Paramount Publix, Postal Telegraph, Republic Iron & Steel, Studebaker Corporation, Southern Colorado Power, and Western Union.

Treasury issues and Liberty bonds were 2-32ds to 9-32ds firmer, but Home Owners Loan 4s and 2s were slightly lower.

The foreign list was irregular. German 7s and Polish 7s declined 1 to 2 points, while French and Japanese government issues were moderately higher.

Curb's Prices Move Upward Under Buying

Industrial Specialties Make Widest Advances; Sales, 248,000 Shares.

New York, June 8 (AP).—Curb stocks moved sharply forward today to the tune of increased buying. Extreme gains at the finish ranged 1 to 4 or more points. Industrial specialties recorded the widest advances but utilities, oils and alcohols rose substantially.

Breaking out of the throes of the recent dull spell, transfers expanded to approximately 248,000 shares, or about twice the daily average turnover of the past few weeks.

Aluminum Co. of America soared 7½ points to close at 72. Dow Chemical, Davenport Hosiery, Lerner Stores and Gulf Oil each ended around 4 points higher, while shares that were marked up about 1 to around 2 included American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share, Parker Rust Proof, Hiram Walker, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Newmont and Consolidated Gas of Baltimore.

Standard Oil of Indiana and Swift & Co. showed fractional improvement. Murphy Co. was an isolated heavy spot. Lake Shore ended a shade lower but other gold shares finished a little higher.

Adjustments Made Necessary By Shortage of Skilled Labor

By Anna P. Youngman.

The committee for the Durable Goods Industries in its report to the President on National Recovery and Unemployment made some very interesting statements concerning the threatened shortage of skilled labor in the heavy industries.

The long-continued depression, it was said, had prevented the training of younger workers to fill skilled positions. Meantime some older workers had died or become superannuated, while others had shifted into new occupations or moved to localities in which work was to be found. As a result, the committee concluded that "if business improves, a scarcity of skilled labor may actually cause an acute stoppage of progress in reemployment."

The light which this simple statement throws upon the serious social maladjustments created by a prolonged depression would provide material for lengthy discussion, but the committee report was primarily concerned with the effect of labor shortage upon industrial activity. Rigid restrictions upon working hours under codes, for example, add to the difficulties created by an insufficiency of skilled labor. If industries are working at a high degree of activity, with an inadequate force of skilled labor, it may be necessary to employ these skilled workers for longer hours than the unskilled in order to provide work for the latter.

May Mean Loss.

If maximum working hours are limited under codes, the unskilled may be forced to work for less than the permitted number of hours, with resultant loss of pay to workers and loss to the employer as well. The necessity of flexibility in working hours has, therefore, been strongly urged by many employers who are looking ahead to the time when the question of labor shortage may become acute. So long as industrial activity is at relatively low ebb, the problem created by an unbalanced labor force employed under conditions that limit the number of hours worked arouse little general interest. Eventually, however, attention will have to be paid to complains that under certain conditions regulations intended to spread work by shortening hours may operate to cut working time and earnings for some classes of workers.

The difficulty is recognized by employers in other countries faced by similar proposals to restrict hours of work and eliminate overtime. A French industrialist, for instance, speaking on behalf of the Association of Metal, Mining and Engineering Industries, recently protested against a movement to abolish overtime, and make no exceptions to statutory hours of work. To abolish these special arrangements, he said, "on the pretext of increasing the utilization of unemployed labor would be about as reasonable as abolishing the safety valve to get up more steam."

May Cause Complications.

And he proceeded to cite instances to prove that this rigid system would often result in forcing large numbers to lose time because the overtime work made necessary by some temporary stoppage or irregularity would be forbidden. This, of course, is a problem that affects all the employes of an establishment, not merely skilled workers, but it indicates the complications that arise when fixed rules prevent opportunistic readjustments.

As the number of restrictive laws, agreements and regulations applicable to industry increase, problems of adaptation became increasingly difficult. This is true not only as regards labor but in respect to trade agreements affecting terms of sale, prices, trade practices, &c.

Elaborate arrangements to protect industry against competitive excesses and safeguard workers against exploitation will, if too rigid, accentuate the evils they are designed to curb and injure those whom they are intended to assist.

Wheat Prices Ease Off After Opening Gains

Profit Taking Cuts Climb of Market to 1/8 to 1/2 Cent at Close.

Chicago, June 8 (AP).—Higher prices on wheat formed the rule most of the time today, but big profit-taking sales at the last largely wiped out gains.

Strength of securities, together with correct anticipation that the Government crop report issued after the close of today's trading would prove bullish, did much to lift wheat about 2 cents a bushel before the late reaction.

Stimulus for wheat market upturns came also from indications of big export business at Winnipeg, together with sharp curtailment of crop estimates in France and Czechoslovakia, stoppage of all agricultural exports from Bulgaria, and urgent need of rain in Australia.

Yield May Be Lower.

Trade comment after the Government report was issued gave emphasis to the fact that the 1934 probable yield of United States winter wheat is about 17,000,000 bushels less than the average of recent private returns, and that the probable rye crop is the smallest since 1875.

The condition of all spring-sown grains as officially announced is by far the lowest on record at this time of year. Spring wheat condition, 41.3 per cent, is about 10 points below the average of latest unofficial estimates.

Prior to the issuance of the Government report, wheat closed nervous, ⅛-½ higher than yesterday's finish, corn unchanged to ⅜ up, oats ⅜-¾ advanced, and provisions showing a rise of 10 to 15 cents.

At first, the wheat market today went lower almost a cent on account of heavy rains in the American Northwest and in the southern portion of the Canadian prairie provinces.

Quick reversal of market action, however, ensued owing a good deal to reports that drought except in the Northwest had not been relieved, and that in the Northwest the rains were too late to change the crop outlook materially for wheat. Forecasts that moisture in the grain belt tonight and tomorrow would be generally restricted to showers gave added encouragement to friends of higher prices.

Purchasing Is Aid.

Aggressive purchasing on the part of a group of Chicago speculators was a factor in hoisting wheat values at this stage, with trade attention focusing a good deal on continued dry weather in the Central West and Southwest.

Then came a sudden upturn of Liverpool wheat quotations, with disturbing advices that the 1934 wheat crop in France would be 60,000,000 to 80,000,000 bushels less than last year, and that drought had cut the Czechoslovakia wheat crop almost in half. In the face of profit-taking the last few minutes of trading, however, price gains rapidly dwindled.

Corn and oats paralleled the action of wheat. Speculative demand for corn was much in evidence owing to belief consumer use of that grain would be increased as a result of damage to other feed.

Provisions advanced, responsive to strength shown by hog values and by corn.

"Little Season" of the National Theater Players Terminates Tomorrow Night

Lively Comedy Now on Boards Writes Finale

Six Weeks of Diversified Bills Have Been Given; About Showshops.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

The die is cast. The current spring season of the National Theater Players will end with Saturday night's performance of "Sailor, Beware."

Contrary to widespread rumor that has pretty thoroughly covered the city these past few days, Manager Stephen E. Cochran, manager of the National and for a round decade impresario of the National Players, yesterday afternoon definitely and finally announced the termination of his tenth "little season" tomorrow night.

Nor will there be presented an extra matinee performance of "Sailor, Beware" today, as has been erroneously bruited about in some quarters.

Thus, it comes about that those who have been deferring attendance upon this ribald and roistering comedy, that is still a substantial hit on Broadway after practically a whole season's run, pending the coming of cooler weather, find themselves left with only three remaining opportunities to see what it is that has appealed so strongly to those with some curiosity concerning love among the gobs.

Last Call to See It.

Unless the play is viewed locally tonight, at tomorrow's matinee or tomorrow night, it will be necessary to travel all the way to New York to see it, or else wait until it comes around, in course of time, as a regular touring road attraction.

The closing of any season of the National Theater Players always is attended by something of a pang to the faithful. They are a charming and talented group of players who take their work seriously and go about their tasks with impeccable good taste. They will be personally and professionally missed.

It is a great change in the view of the public toward repertoire productions that has taken place in Washington during the past four or five years. A few of the old guard remain who display the same faithful enthusiasm toward their favorites as used to be extended in the old days to the personnel of the Columbia Players and the later Poli Stock Company. But these are not sufficiently in the majority to make Panjandrum Cochran's annual venture anything but a desperate hazard.

Times Have Changed.

The days of the overflow crowds at eight performances a week and vast interest in, and enthusiasm for, everyone on the stage and everything they did, good, bad or indifferent—and sometime we got all three—have passed into the limbo of a recent oblivion. The present public is evidently paced to a different tempo and attuned to a totally different point of view.

It would be interesting to know precisely what it is they want in the legitimate theater—especially at the bargain prices Manager Cochran, by some box office legerdemain, has contrived to keep in force these many years now. Certainly there can have been no quibbling about not receiving full money's worth.

Perhaps it is that the prices have been too low. There are times, unfortunately, when merit is estimated entirely on a basis of cost to the customer.

There is no end to the unexpected things that can bob up during the conduct of a stock season, incidentally. For instance, in one scene of "Sailor, Beware," the principal feminine character in Prof. Kenyon Nicholson's rhapsody of the fleshpots has her room gaily decorated with the pennants of various institutions of high learning which she quite obviously never attended. To lend this scene a local as well as atmospheric fillip, numerous pennants of Washington schools and seminaries were secured and clubbily displayed. Yesterday afternoon, representatives of one of the more profoundly punctilious of these Capital institutions demanded with some asperity that its pennant be removed from visibility amid surroundings so frankly dedicated to what at least may be described as unconventionality. So that modest guidon no longer constitutes a part of the scenic embellishment of the more intimate moments of "Sailor, Beware."

Popular Bands on Way.

Johnny Long and his Duke Collegians, popular dance orchestra from Duke University, will be on hand to entertain dance enthusiasts at Chevy Chase Lake tonight according to Managers Eddie Carr and Al Stern, jointly operating the lake. The Collegians come to Washington fresh from successful tours in the South.

Organized as recently as 1931, when members of the orchestra were freshmen at Duke, the Collegians already have gone far and are known as one of the best dance aggregations, to be found in this part of the country. They specialize in the Wayne King sort of lilting melodies, although they are by no means strangers to "hot" rhythm. The band is composed of 12 members—six arrangers and six composers. They have written and presented several exclusive numbers.

After offering its patrons another "headline" orchestra tomorrow night, the Chevy Chase Lake management will bring George Hall and his famous Hotel Taft Orchestra here on Wednesday. This organization is heard over the Columbia broadcasting network perhaps oftener than any other in the country.

Other outstanding orchestras booked for early engagements at the lake include Ozzie Nelson and his band; Mal Hallett and the Brad Calloway Orchestra.

Meanwhile dancing will be resumed every night in the week at Chevy Chase Lake, beginning Monday. So now you know.

It is belatedly that we get around to patting ourself on the back for the superlative excellence of the interview with The Post Impressionist which we didn't write on the editorial page of Wednesday's issue of this superior family journal.

It was, as you must have noted, a superb bit of imagery. We hope to do another one as good some time—under similar circumstances of complete absence of wear and tear on the creative faculty, if any.

In the meantime, Mr. Impressionist, unless we have been grossly kidded all these years, the name is Nelson, not Norman. But under any name, you never would have got our drink!

"Discovery" a Habit.

Hollywood has discovered Hugh Williams. Since this is the second time he has been Columbused, one beings to suspect that by now it may stick.

The handsome young English actor was first noticed by film scouts in 1925 when he toured the country in "Journey's End," that amazingly realistic play that came out of the war under the pen of R. C. Sherriff. At that time, he was induced to take part in the memorable screen version of the old Hoyt wheelhorse, "Charley's Aunt."

Mr. Williams returned then to his native England and the American screen colony proceeded to forget all about him until he appeared in the role of the son, Kit, in British & Dominion's new talking version of Warwick Deeping's "Sorrell and Son," a United Artists' release, to be shown for the first time locally at RKO-Keith's beginning Sunday.

Then They Remembered.

Then Hollywood remembered and Fox promptly put the young man under an advantageous, long-term contract.

Born in Bexhill-on-the-Sea, Sussex, England, he attended a private school and then went to Hailleybury College. He chucked his scholastic activities, however, to enroll at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts and made his stage debut in "The Charm School," on tour, in England. A two-and-a-half-year apprenticeship with the Liverpool Repertory Theater was followed by "The Best People," "The Gold Diggers" and "The Garden of Eden."

He spent a season with Dion Boucicault in Australia, and later appeared in the London productions of "The Matriarch," "Grand Hotel," "The Firebird" and "The Green Bay Tree."

In "Sorrell and Son" he supports H. B. Warner, who appears in the role which he created in the silent version of the same story.

Benny Davis, song writer, night club operator, actor and producer, who has succeeded Gus Edwards as the American theater's foremost discoverer of rising juvenile stage talent, arrived in Washington yesterday to tune up for his week's engagement at Loew's Fox. I know of no one who can by the very persuasiveness of his own dynamic inspire his youthful proteges to such miracles of prodigious effort as Benny. When he is out there egging them on, they give everything they've got, as the saying goes. Look at Vilma and Buddy Ebsen, for example. They started with Benny and now see where they are!

Am I Mortified!

Imagine my embarrassment and deep humiliation when a playful wag whose major occupation seems to be cutting up newspapers, sends to my desk a clipping from the advertising columns of the daily press which, under the heading of "Good Whisky News," makes the following startling announcement: "Bell of Nelson Is Here!"

This, of course, is an infringement that nothing can either justify or placate.

Featured Today on Local Screens

Straight From the Studios

International Balloting on for "Copperfield" Cast; More Cartoon Comedies in Natural Color; Hollywood Items of Interest.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, June 7.—It's to be a casting contest now for "David Copperfield." In other words, David O. Selznick, who is producing the Dickens classic, wants to get English opinion on who should play the roles of the grown-up Copperfield, Micawber, Uriah Heep, Aunt Betsy, Barkis, Dora, Agnes, Little Em'ly, Mrs. Micawber, Steerforth and Clara Pegotty. And a prize is being offered in England for the selection of the most ideal cast.

MARIE DRESSLER.

Here are the players that are being considered for the various roles: Robert Montgomery, Leslie Howard, Brian Aherne, Lionel Barrymore, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Seymour Hicks, Donald Calthrop, Sidney Howard, Jimmy Durante, Marie Dresseler, May Robson, Emily Fitzroy, Leslie Henson, Gordon Harker, Forrester Harvey, Madge Evans, Elizabeth Allen, Molly Lamont, Norma Shearer, Helen Hayes, Diana Wynyard, Maureen O'Sullivan, Victoria Hopper, Jean Parker, Lady Tree, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Polly Moran, Frederic March, Clark Gable, Godfrey Tearle, Wallace Beery, Edmund Gwenn and Bransby Williams.

It is about evenly divided between players known on the American screen and those associated with the English studios. Whether each and every player finally selected will come from this list isn't certain, but there's a good chance that such will be the case.

Selznick, Director George Cukor and Scenarist Howard Estabrook are leaving England Wednesday for America, and the result of the contest will be transmitted to them.

Natural Color Note.

"Merry Melodies" cartoons are to be released in color. A definite arrangement has been made to this end by Leon Schlesinger with Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president of Technicolor. "Silly Symphonies" are among the cartoons now being presented in color. There are 13 "Merry Melodies" to be made during the year for release through Warner Bros.

East Wins Bellamy.

Ralph Bellamy is another Hollywood actor who is about to be lured East for a picture. He has just been signed to do the male role opposite Fay Wray in "Woman in the Dark," and will leave for New York as soon as he finishes in "By Persons Unknown" at the Columbia studio. It seems that there is quite a demand for Bellamy and Miss Wray to appear opposite each other since "Below the Sea" and "Once to Every Woman."

* * * *

Novarro Picture Titled.

Title of the production in which Ramon Novarro and Evelyn Laye will appear together is "Tiptoes," and it will have to do with the German Imperial Ballet. The production is being written by Oscar Hammerstein 2d, based on an original by Vicki Baum. Shooting is to start early in September, when Novarro returns from his concert-touring.

Picture Pageant Now Passing.

Gloria Stuart and Edmund Lowe will be teamed together in "Gift o' Gab," which will be started next week.

Ann Sothern's contract with Columbia is being continued; she is shortly to work in Eddie Cantor's next film.

Kay Francis returned to work yesterday in "British Agent," after about a week's rest, necessitated by her wrist injury.

Russ Columbo returns to the radio after a year's absence.

Dickie Moore has been engaged for the principal child role in "The Human Side," with Adolphe Menjou and Doris Kenyon.

Florence Rice, daughter of Grantland Rice, nationally known sports writer, will arrive from New York this week by plane to fulfill her Columbia contract.

Tead Healy had to cancel his plans for a Hawaiian vacation in order to assume a character role in "All Good Americans."

"Born to Be Kissed" is the new title of the Jean Harlow feature, "100 Per Cent Pure."

Mountain Fever Blamed in Death

3-Year-Old Boy Succumbs to Ailment.

Mount Airy, Md., June 8 (Spl.).—Rocky Mountain spotted fever, a disease which caused two deaths in this community last year, this week proved fatal to Robert Lee King, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie King, near Damascus.

Funeral services for the infant were held yesterday at his home. Five brothers and his parents survive.

While the ailment was not definitely pronounced Rocky Mountain spotted fever, Dr. George M. Boyer and Montgomery County Health Officer V. L. Ellicott, concurred that all the symptoms indicated spotted fever. Members of the household were given vaccine.

Hollar, Civil War Veteran, Is Dead

Baltimore, June 8 (Spl.).—Another of Maryland's few remaining veterans of the Civil War died today.

He was Valentine Hollar, 87, who at the age of 14 enlisted in an Ohio regiment of the Union Army. He was a member of the expedition which captured the famed Gen. John Hunt Morgan, Confederate raider, and 300 of his men, following a spectacular foray through Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana in 1863.

Mr. Hollar became an oil refiner after the war and came to Baltimore about 25 years ago. He made his home with two daughters in Milford, a suburb. He was noted throughout the East as a trainer of race horses.

He will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

Church Speaker Named.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 8 (Spl.). — Lester B. Dudrow will speak at the Layman's Day Service at the Methodist Church here Sunday at 7:30 p. m. Mr. Dutrow is the city manager of Front Royal, Va.

Central Trust Stock Liability List Is Drawn

Chief Examiner to Present It to Court Within Few Days.

Frederick, Md., June 8 (Spl.).—At the request of the judge of the circuit court, H. E. Meeks, chief examiner of the Maryland State Bank Commission, began today to prepare a list of assessments of stock in the defunct Central Trust Co.

Under the double liability law, stockholders are liable for the full amount of their stock at par value.

Mr. Meeks stated that he expects the list to be completed within a few days.

There were 1,859 stockholders in the Central Trust Co. at the time of its closing, but approximately 50 per cent of the stock was owned by 35 individuals and four listed syndicates.

The Meeks asset appraisal report, filed here two and a half weeks ago, listed these largest stockholders and the number of shares they held. Of the 150,000 shares of stock issued by the Central Trust Co. at $10 per share, the largest listed holder was the Blue Ridge Investment Co., with 25,000 shares. The Blue Ridge Investment Co. was also one of the largest borrowers from the bank.

"Stock syndicates" are listed as holders of 23,033 shares. The largest individual holder of stock was Emery L. Coblentz, president, whose holdings were listed at 6,878 shares.

The appraisal shows the following table of stock assessments: Total assessment at $10 per share, $1,500,000; amount paid to receiver in cash to date, $229,579.34; unpaid, $1,270,420.66; appraisal, $60,000.

Throughout the Central Trust Co. hearings the court has shown a direct interest in the matter of stock liability. At the hearing to collect stockholders' liability, February 10 last, Judge Urner stated that while the court had rescinded two of the trust companies bank mergers on the ground of mutual mistake, in neither case did it relieve the stockholders of their liability, and that in the case of the newly created bank at Smithsburg the stockholders were actually liable for three times as much stock as they formerly were.

In August, 1933, former Judge John S. Newman, counsel for the receiver, filed suit to collect statutory liability from 73 leading Central Trust Co.'s stockholders. The case was intended as a test, since a suit against 1,859 separate stockholders was termed hopelessly unwieldy.

Retribution.

For a time the busy grafter loots the people and the town, but there comes the morning after when his luck is fallen down. For a time his brisk attorneys keep the issues all perplext, as they make their futile journeys from one courthouse to the next. All in vain their elocution, all in vain their snort and tear; it is time for retribution and the grafter gets his share. He is standing, shorn and friendless, at the well-known justice bar; tribulations fierce and endless give him grievous jolt and jar. And the judge in costly ermine gives him 47 years, and hands down a lengthy sermon that would move a goat to tears. We have read of many grafters going to the pen to stay, where, beneath the iron rafters, they will wear their lives away. For a time the active bandit seems the favored of the gods; if there's plunder he will land it, rob the people of their wads. In his evil, base endeavor he is satisfied, no doubt, that his luck will last forever, that it never will run out. But at last he's brought to justice, in the courthouse old and gray, and the jurist says, "Augustus, crime's a graft that doesn't pay. I shall spend no time haranguing, which would be a waste of breath, you'll be better for a hanging, so I sentence you to death."

Radio Waves and Ripples

WE ARE afraid, basing our apprehension upon a letter E. B. M. has written, "The Anonymous Radio Editor," that the care-free years of our irresolute youth have quietly slipped away and that we are, inevitably, getting somewhere.

We blame Arthur Godfrey for causing us unintentionally to turn our back upon a once happy and aimless existence, though we wish E. B. M. had been able in some manner to prepare us for a disheartening discovery, announced thus bluntly:

"Dear Sir or Madam:

"If through knocking 'The Great' Arthur Godfrey, as you name him, you are endeavoring to boost him, I feel that you are rapidly accomplishing your purpose."

So that is how purpose has stolen into our life! And now that its insidious entry has been made, we are given to understand that it is marching our way in great, rapid strides. And worse, far worse, it's the wrong purpose!

We are not trying to boost Mr. Godfrey. Nor are we the least inclined to deprecate him.

Some years ago we heard one of our teachers say that the true function of a critic is to judge, and under it the amiable Ted, who gets about the country quite a bit to follow sports for Columbia.

HUSING'S HAT,

either adversely or favorably, or both at the same time, and that seemed nicely suited to our then goalless life, so we decided, then and there, that the very first time our desires took definite shape we should ask to be a critic.

THAT is not how we became a radio editor, who is a sort of critic. We became a radio editor quite as fortuitously as some three decades earlier it was discovered that the proper salutation for us should be "sir," never "madam."

If we haven't already done so, we think it our duty resolutely and clearly to apply the critical yardstick to Mr. Godfrey. With E. B. M. we hold that Godfrey and a microphone produce "a living person who takes us into his confidence as to his manner of living . . . one of our family." But we also hold that there are times when an acknowledged artistry fails, for us, to sugar coat Mr. Godfrey's distinctly unpalatable estimation of himself. At these times we have, of course, merely to cross the room, turn the dial and our "family" reassumes its normal size.

We think we understand what the Sun Dialer has had to overcome. And it may be that a generous approbation of himself is essential to his own sustenance. We arise to suggest, however, that the same artistry that makes him for the most part an amiable and likeable personality on the air be employed with the same effect elsewhere. The reward, we think, would be unpredictable.

"To conduct, day after day, a program in such a way as to retain the interest of the public" the way Mr. Godfrey admittedly does is undoubtedly an accomplishment. We couldn't do it, as E. B. M. suggests. We are deathly afraid of microphones. We admire those who are not. But we can't resist considering the equally pathetic inadequacy that would be the result of our calling upon a friend of ours who knows enough about English setters to award them blue and red ribbons, to dig up a covey of quail and hold them long enough for us to get into shooting position.

IT was N. B. C.'s publicity department that tipped us off to Columbia's exclusive broadcasting of the reading of President Roosevelt's social legislation message in the House yesterday.

She called breathlessly to report that National had just been granted authority to broadcast all the Presidential message readings it wants to from now until Congress adjourns.

We wondered if N. B. C. had developed a sudden propensity for Presidential messages, or if Mr. Roosevelt was planning to make messages to Congress every day, or . . . so we asked Columbia's publicity department to tell us what they expected to do.

She told us it had already been done, that Ted Church and Bob Trout had gone to the Capitol, that the President's message had been read, and broadcast, that a little speech Mr. Rainey had to make had been picked up and that Mr. Church and a dozen or so Representatives had chatted informally. She said she had enjoyed herself very much, thank you, and that in case of further Presidential messages—the one on drought relief today, for instance—C. B. S. left its equipment where it would be handy.

N. B. C. said it was too bad they had a commercial that couldn't be canceled—an engaging five minutes on home decorating—and that anyway they had Carlton Smith read the message during the Farm, Home Hour, which should have satisfied every one, and furthermore they have that authority from Mr. Rainey.

They were very emphatic. They said they most certainly had not been scooped. They said they were quite happy and felt fine, thank you.

The City of Rochester, N. Y., celebrates the one hundredth anniversary of its incorporation today, and is responsible for a program of unusually impressive proportions on N. B. C.'s blue network (WMAL) at 8 p. m.

Dr. Howard Hanson will direct the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra in special music, based on his opera, "Merry Mount," one of the memorable spots of last season at the Metropolitan. A concert by the Rochester Civic Chorus also will be a part of the program. There will be the usual speeches.

The massing of 50 high school bands at Cambridge, Mass.—3,500 school boy and girl musicians, under the direction of Edwin Franko Goldman—should also reward your dialing, though you probably will be required to tune WEAF at 3 p. m.

One of the strangest monuments ever erected was placed in Stuttgart, Wurtemburg, Germany, to mark the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Kaiser Wilhelm I. The monument was a fossilized prehistoric fish, 12 feet long and more than 6 feet around at the head. It bore the legend, "Zum Andenken an die Centearfeier." ("In Memory of the Hundredth Anniversary.")

"Mug" is not a new slang word for "face." Its earliest use with this meaning, as cited by the Oxford dictionary, goes back to 1708. The word first came into the English language to mean a drinking vessel, about 1570, when it was adopted from Sweden and Norway.

The slang expression probably arose from the fact that in the early eighteenth century drinking mugs were often made in the form of grotesque human faces. The term took on the new meaning of grotesque face, and is now broadly used to signify any face, although it still retains the connotation of grotesqueness.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Jocko Sleeps While Uncle Joe Is Restless.

After shooting the gun over Uncle Joe's head, Jocko went back to his old home in the big willow tree, down by the fishing hole, and stayed there all night. He found everything there just as he had left it. The boat was still tied up under the bushes, and not a thing had been disturbed. He thought how nice it would be to stay there all day and go fishing.

If it hadn't been for Blackie and the other folks up in the woods without a driver, he certainly would have spent the day on Bear Creek. But he just couldn't stay, since he had promised Blackie to go back. He just lolled around for a little while, looking out over the creek, and thinking about the day when the great big fish broke Blackie's pole and made him fall into the creek. And then he thought about what a good sport Blackie was to throw down the broken pole and dive down to the roots of the tree to get Mr. Big Fish. He couldn't go back on such a fellow by leaving him without a driver when he wanted to be moving along, and so he lit out for Blackie's house to join Jay Bird and the dogs.

He got there just as breakfast was ready, and he and Howler and Hound Dog had a pretty good time over their breakfast. There was plenty to talk about, and they could have spent the day there telling about the things that each had seen in the last day or so. When Jocko told them how he had shot the gun over Uncle Joe's head and scared him almost to death, Howler laughed and laughed and laughed till he nearly got chocked on a piece of pig. He hadn't got over hurting from that lick that Uncle Joe struck him yesterday, and he was mighty glad that somebody had done something to Uncle Joe.

"It served him just right," said Howler, "and I hope he will be able to appreciate a good dog if he ever gets another one. The idea of his beating me up just because I went on a visit while he was gone, when he had said time and again that Blackie was dead! I couldn't tell any more about what was going to happen than Uncle Joe could, and he was not afraid to go away and leave his things. If he hadn't said that Blackie was dead, I never would have gone away from home. So that's what he got for telling something as a fact when he only thought it was so. Well, maybe he will be more careful about what he says next time."

Even when he knew that Blackie was waiting for him, the breakfast was so good, and there was so much to talk about that Jocko found it mighty hard to get away. But he just couldn't wait any longer, so he grabbed a bone in one hand and a biscuit in the other, told Hound Dog that he had to run along to Blackie, and scooted out of the door.
